This is not Venice.
It's a studio in Queens.
They're not flirting with the charming Italian waiter.
They're models, they laugh at anything.

But the wine is Italian.

GRANDS VINS DE FRANCE

BEAUNE DU CHATEAU PREMIER CRU

100% CHARDONNAY
BEAUNE, FRANCE

Two Exciting New Wines from Bouchard

The Beaune du Chateau label was born in 1907 and has become a classic in the Bouchard Pere & Fils portfolio of greatness. These two exclusive wines are crafted from Premier Cru vineyard sites and reflect the character of their terroir. After traditional vinification in Beaune, these wines are aged in Bouchard's flawless cellars. The results are wines that are beautiful expressions of Chardonnay and Pinot Noir.

BEAUNE DU CHATEAU BLANC PREMIER CRU 2002

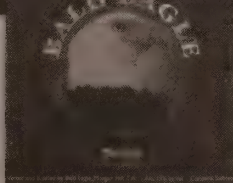

This 100% Chardonnay comes from the Premier Cru vineyards of Les Aigrots, Les Sizies, Les Tuvilains, and Sur Les Greves, all of which belong to Bouchard Pere & Fils. It offers an elegant bouquet of flowers and fruit and is underpinned by a soft, vanilla note. (803)

BEAUNE DU CHATEAU ROUGE PREMIER CRU 2002

This 100% Pinot Noir is the counterpart to the white wine above. Crafted from Premier Cru Beaune vineyards, it is finely perfumed with a harmonious character, ripe, rich fruit and soft, pleasing tannins. (7040)

SAG HARBOR MOVIE THEATER

Deja Vu Again

The Battle For The Sag Harbor Sign Could Turn Upside Down

By Dan Rattiner

As I am writing this, the big, neon, SAG HARBOR movie sign is off the wall of that theatre and about to go to a sign shop for a complete restoration. If you ask me, they better hurry. The beautiful old sign could still go in the dumpster.

You may recall that a month ago, a workman arrived in front of the theatre with a newly made plastic sign he intended to put up to replace the neon sign. If it hadn't been for Brenda Siemer, who happened to come out of a yoga studio just across the street in time to see the neon letters being taken down off the building, the old sign might have been taken to the scrap heap right then and there. Ms. Siemer, by cell phone, rallied the entire town to prevent that new plastic sign from going up. And then the townspeople essentially absconded with the old sign, bringing it first to the Sag Harbor Museum and then to a warehouse on Long Wharf for safe keeping.

The saving of this neon sign has been one of the great success stories of the East End. Subsequently, details were worked out — the theatre owner said he had no idea the sign meant so much to the town — a fundraiser was held and $17,000 raised to have the old neon sign refurbished. It is going to be quite a job.

And yet, there are two factors that could still scuttle the return of the neon sign. One is normal human memory loss. The other is the historic nature of Sag Harbor Village.

Deja Vu (continued from page 21)

An example of the memory loss I am talking about took place in Bridgehampton not long ago. The owner of the Carvel ice cream store, which is right across the street from the Bridgehampton Commons shopping center, applied to the town to put back on the roof the tall, slowly spinning ice cream cones that had been there for many years. He still has them.

Many people with long memories spoke of the time those spinning cones invited them in for a treat. The Carvel was erected in 1950. The cones were up for a quarter of a century. But then a former owner had taken them down.

At this point, however, another quarter of a century had passed, and there were a lot of new people who had moved here who had no idea about what those ice cream cones represented at the entrance to Bridgehampton. They represented romance and big convertible cars, boyfriends and girlfriends. There was, at that time, a drive-in movie across the street you could take your date to. There were people who remembered sneaking their friends in free by having them curl up in the trunk. There were stories of double blind dates, where the guys went to the snack bar, discussed the matter, decided they each liked the other's blind date better and so came back and, without asking, simply switched by getting in the front or back seat where it had been the other way around when they had gone out.

But now, in 2000, new people, who were horrified by the idea of a "Jersey Shore" icon at the entrance to Bridgehampton, scuttled the matter. Those twirling plastic ice cream cones remain in storage today.

You may think this is not the same thing, but really it is. Think for a minute of how out of character the big neon sign is in Sag Harbor. This is an architecturally historic town that thrived in the early nineteenth century and was largely completed in the Victorian era in the late nineteenth century. Now, here comes 1930 and this new theatre is built and its big neon sign put up in the art-deco style of that era. It dominates Main Street. Until one month ago, the entire town basked in the glow of this sign at night, great four foot high letters stretching out nine feet to form the word SAG or fifteen feet to form the word HARBOR. Photographers took pictures of it. Painters made oil paintings of it. Those two words, SAG HARBOR, became identified with that town, and now provide the backdrop for the memories and activities of almost all who live there.

Indeed, to the local residents, Main Street now seems bereft at night without the SAG HARBOR neon. So get those old letters up there quickly.

If we dawdle around and the years pass, sure as hell when workmen with ladders are finally putting up the old neon letters, somebody will run out of a store — probably someone who has only been in town a short time — and yell STOP!

And we'll be right back where we started.

* * *

As we go to press, we learn that the old sign is too rusty to repair, but can be replicated. Ms. Siemer is working to arrange to have the rusted SAG auctioned off at the Bay Street fundraiser this Saturday night, as the replication process proceeds. •

Three Mile Harbor, Saturday, July 17

BANG!

Boat Theft, Hostage Taking, Mate Overboard And Other Fireworks

By Dan Rattiner

Every summer, I look forward to the Bastille Day Fireworks that are set off from a barge anchored in the center of Three Mile Harbor. They are held after dark on the evening of July 14 or thereabouts, roughly approximating the Declaration of Independence of France, but conforming to a Saturday night in the Hamptons. This year they were on July 17. And they are absolutely superior to any other fireworks held on the East End on the Fourth of July. They are just so amazing and that's the way it is. The event is probably the most widely anticipated and attended on the East End in any given year.

There are four ways you can view these unbelievable fireworks. You can drive to Three Mile Harbor and find yourself a spot to park and set up a blanket along one of the many waterfront parks and beaches there, which is what probably 10,000 people do. Or you can call someone you know who has a house overlooking Three Mile Harbor and invite yourself over, bringing a bottle of wine (French, not Long Island). Or you can buy a ticket to the grounds of Boys and Girls do that.

The fourth way, however, is the best way. And it's the way I've always enjoyed this event. In fact, it's why I have a boat. I keep it at Town Dock, at the most southerly end of the Harbor. It is nineteen feet long, about twenty years old, and is basically just an old waterskiing boat with a steering wheel, a windshield, a push button that starts the 110-horsepower Merc in the back and seating for six. It also has beer can size cup holders. I take it to go out for dinner and see the sunset at one or another of the waterfront restaurants in the area, maybe five times a year. Other than that it just sits there, except for on Bastille Day when it has its most important job. This old waterski boat goes out to join a thousand other boats that drop anchor and sit, rocking in a big circle around the fireworks barge. After the sun sets, and the fireworks go off, its the most exciting thing ever. France is free. The world is wonderful. The Harbor makes money. Pass the wine.

This year, I figured, would go like any other. Boy, was I wrong.

The first thing that went wrong happened at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon when I went over to the docks to check on my boat. I had last used it three weeks earlier. The floating dock where my boat is, a Town owned marina, has ten vessels side by side. I walked down the dock. There were ten boats. None of them was mine. I walked back and forth, a second time. Then a third time. I could not believe my eyes. No boat.

There were some people sitting on a boat in a slip nearby, talking.

"Uh, have you seen my boat?" I asked.

"What does it look like?"

"Uh, it has an engine. It's blue."

"There's a blue one right over there," someone said, pointing.

"Nope," I said.

Conversation aboard this boat had completely come to an end when they heard about the missing boat. Where was his boat? A few men got out of this boat. If there were boat thieves about, they would deal with them. They looked this way and that.

"I never had my boat stolen before," I said to these perfect strangers.

Various speculations arose. Maybe somebody had moved it. Had I lent it to anybody? Had I tied it up good? Maybe it had floated off. Maybe it was at the boatyard getting fixed and I forgot. None of the above.

"You should call the police," someone finally said. Then they climbed back aboard their boat and proceeded to stare at me.

I wandered off the floating dock and walked up and down all the boardwalks, looking at all the other boats. Everyone was having such a good time.

For some reason, what I thought of was — how was I going to go to the party in the harbor? This was terrible.

Before I called the police, however, I thought maybe the marina people had, on their own and without telling me, come and taken the boat in for repair. It always had something wrong with it. In twenty years with a boat in Three Mile Harbor, I never heard of a boat getting stolen, though. Yet I asked the inevitable question when I called on the cell phone.

"Are people stealing lots of boats?"

"Not YOUR old boat," Matt said.

I let that sink in. Next I called the police. They said call the Marine Police. So I called them and I got a recording which said that if this was an emergency call the regular police. It was an emergency, not being able to go to the fireworks. So I called back the regular police back.

"Hold on," the regular police said. "We can call the Marine Police. We have a special line."

The police officer got back to me. "Go to Gann Road marina. They will meet you there. They've towed a boat from Town Dock. You should look at it."

I went to Gann Road Marina, two miles up the road, and there, sitting quietly, tied up in a slip, was my boat, perfectly fine. Nobody else was there. So I called back to the police.

"It's here," I said gloriously. "I could just drive off in it."

"Don't touch it," the officer told me. "It's been impounded. Wait."

Fifteen minutes went by. And I was getting miserabler and miserabler. Sitting on the dock, staring out into the harbor, waiting, I saw all these people out in their boats, girls in bikinis and t-shirts and shorts, guys in cut offs and hats, all whooping and shouting. My boat was impounded. But then, off in the distance, I saw a police boat with a flashing blue light on top heading toward me. Maybe this would have a happy ending, after all.

It turned out that someone had called the police the day before to say there was this boat in their boat slip. The police had come and they had checked the boat in the slip and it was registered to someone in Mount Sinai. So they towed it away. They had no idea it was my boat.

I produced a registration for the boat, and the marine officer boarded it and looked at the VIN number. It was my boat, all right. But the registration numbers on the side were wrong for some reason. As far as my being in the wrong slip goes, I had no idea. And I still have no idea.

"I got my slip over 20 years ago," I told the officer. "I paid for it this year, too."

What I didn't tell him was the wacko story about getting the slip. Years ago, I'd put my name on the waiting list. I'd have to wait about four years til a slip came open, they told me. Four years later, I called the Town Clerk to ask when would I be next. She said I wasn't on the list. I went berserk. OK, she said, you're next.

"We'll have to sort it all out on Monday," the officer said. "But go take your boat. Enjoy the fireworks. Bring it back here if you have to. No big deal."

What we did, therefore, myself, Christine and Mark, was drive up to Gann Road at 7 p.m., get in the boat and make ready to drive off. Mark has his own boat, but we had invited him, so it would be our boat this time. He would mate.

I started her up, but as Mark untied us from the slip, he missed a step and put his leg into thin air between the boat and the dock and went down the slot. Somehow he grabbed onto things on his way down and struggled his way back up. We hauled him in.

"Let's go," he said. He acted as if nothing had happened.

He was bleeding though, from scrapes on his legs and arms. Fortunately, we had a first aid box on the boat and so we fixed him up. What didn't work, however, were the electric lights. I don't know why. We broke out some flashlights. Mark took one apart trying to make it into a taillight for the boat and broke that. We were down to one flashlight.

"When it gets dark," Mark said, "You'll get a ticket for this."

Arriving uneventfully at the barge, I noted

LIU Board Of Directors Pledges That Southampton Campus Will Be Used In The Future Only For Educational Purposes

By Dan Rattiner

It's a funny thing. One day Southampton College is this safe and snug cultural anchor for the East End, the next day it is announced that the whole thing is going to collapse. And the day after that, it is announced that Southampton College is going to be saved. That's the news this week. But hang onto your hat. As they say, it ain't over until the fat lady sings.

The fact is, however, that never in the history of the East End have so many officials and important people come to the aid of a cultural institution in serious distress.

Last week, after Long Island University announced that they would be closing the school, there was a meeting in western Suffolk County of our State Assemblyman, our Senator, Congressman, Suffolk County Executive, Town Supervisor and State Senator announcing their unanimous agreement to prevent LIU from selling the school campus to make a real estate killing. Heaven and earth would be moved to prevent that from happening. And that would include moving to condemn the campus if necessary, to make it part of the State University system, connected up with either Stony Brook University or Eastern Suffolk College.

During the rest of the week, a wide variety of individuals and groups began bashing Long Island University's Board for abandoning the school, and there was lots of shouting and yelling at President Steinberg, the head of LIU from up Island, as he met with members of this

"JUST A SMALL PERSONAL MATTER": MARTHA STEWART

By Dan Rattiner

The thing about the Martha Stewart case that continues to bother me is that nobody ever talks about the poor shlub who bought the $50,000 worth of Imclone stock that she sold. She calls it a "small personal matter" that got blown out of proportion. Well, twelve jurors are convinced that she knew the stock was going to tank. Somewhere out there, there is somebody who bought those shares for that amount of money and found it just about worthless the next day. It was no "small personal matter" to him. Or her. In fact, I don't see that it's any different than reaching into somebody's pocket, taking out their wallet and running off with $50,000 of their money.

I do know there are a lot of people out there who say we ought to forgive her for this. It's no huge sum from her perspective. And she has done a lot of good in the world, which she certainly has. But I do think people expected better of her. It was the people who bestowed this success upon her.

You can argue that other people make these insider-knowledge stock sales all the time (as if that makes it right). Think of the old robber barons who built the railroads and coal mines a hundred years ago, and who sold stock in those enterprises to the general public that became worthless paper. They took the money from the sale of this stock, did a little hocus pocus with the numbers and something they

Southampton campus, which LIU owns, to explain things. He met with students, with faculty, with alumni and with administration, all of whom universally provided him with a horrendous tongue-lashing not usually inflicted upon an important member of academia. Students announced they were willing to go door to door to save the college. "It's too late," Steinberg told them. The reaction was what you might expect, hearing that.

The media was unusually unkind to the board of LIU too. Dan's Papers rained despicable adjectives down on the LIU board, questioning their motives and ethics. Newsday's entire front page this past Sunday headlined to the story about THE LITTLE COLLEGE THAT COULDN'T, leading off a story that blamed the college's impending demise largely on the neglect of Southampton by LIU, which was too busy with other things to attend to problems on the East End. The facilities went into disrepair. Enrollment declined. Yet when a billionaire, Robert FX Sillerman, stepped in with an exciting plan to save the school, largely funded with his own money, LIU pulled the plug. Even though he would pay for much of it, they wouldn't pay for the rest.

Now, Dan's Papers has learned that at a meeting on Monday morning, the LIU Board voted to take several new actions. They would promise that this 110-acre campus would always, in the future, no matter what happened, remain an educational institution. They would never sell off the property for residential or commercial development and they would never embark on such a project themselves. Perhaps to show their good faith, they agreed immediately to begin negotiations with the Parrish Museum to sell them 10 acres of the property for cultural purposes. Prior to this, they had made only a handshake agreement with the Museum to become part of the campus, but had not worked out any of the details.

On the other hand, LIU reconfirmed their decision to close Southampton College in the fall of 2005. The faculty and students will be moved to their C.W. Post campus. As for Southampton, LIU would create a committee to explore educational options for the future of that campus.

Late on Monday, President Steinberg appeared at a meeting of the Board of Overseers of Southampton College, a group of concerned local citizens that includes Southampton Chancellor Robert FX Sillerman, who also sits on the LIU Board and who, after hearing that the LIU Board around him was pulling the plug on his school, decided to vote with the majority and make it unanimous. At that point, he was in favor of severing the LIU-Southampton connection too.

In any case, President Steinberg told the called Trusts, and made huge fortunes. They built massive mansions for themselves and their families. American royalty, they called themselves.

Along came President Theodore Roosevelt with a promise to break those Trusts. He did. And so, with this crookedness made illegal and with taxation making some of the money available for the first time, he started social services in this country for children, and the elderly, and the poor and infirm.

Last night, I heard George W. Bush answer a question about the fact that there are 40,000,000 Americans who don't have health insurance. He said his health insurance plan is to leave the whole thing up to the free market system. "I am a great believer in the capitalistic society. I've made my stand and I stand by that." In other words, if the money doesn't make it happen, it ain't going to happen.

Is it really all about the money? Is that an excuse for not taking care of what needs to be taken care of? Not long ago in this community, our local governments had almost no funds available to protect farmland and the parks system from turning into housing developments. They tried to control developers with regulations. They failed.

I can still recall one developer and his

The High-Diving Cat Act

Up With Animals

Elephants, High Diving Cats, The Circus, Polo And Dogs On The Beach

By Dan Rattiner

We were sitting out on the patio of the Blue Parrot in East Hampton drinking margueritas the other night, when one of the people from Westhampton Beach issued this show stopper.

"There's an invasion of bats out where we are. They're everywhere after dark."

A long silence ensued.

"I think we've got the beginnings of the problem in Shinnecock Hills where I live," someone else said. "I saw one in my backyard hanging from a tree."

There was more silence, while we all contemplated which exterminator you call. Then again, this was beyond the control of an exterminator. What could you do?

"That's another item for your paper, Dan," someone finally said.

It broke the ice, such as it was, for the rest of the evening and our little after theatre drink didn't break up until around midnight. But we still found ourselves looking at the trees on our sharks, about mosquitoes, about the cicadas, the deer, the seals that waddle up on the beach, injured.

With the deer, we shoot them. A survey of the number of deer in Southampton came out last week and they are far more numerous than previously believed. Get out the hunters. Thin the herd.

And then there's cats. We protect cats. Two weeks ago, the Town Board of Southampton spent one hour ruminating on whether or not to allow the circus to come to town. A request for a permit had been filed. Cole Brothers wanted to set up on the grounds of the VFW Hall in Southampton on County Road 39 on August 2 and 3, and they promised they wouldn't bring elephants. Protesters had demonstrated way to our cars.

They're movin' east.

What do we do about bats? About ticks? About locusts, about termites, about the against elephants in prior years. At the meeting, though, there still were protesters, and so, in the end, the Town Board, sort of throwing the protesters a bone, decided that along with the elephants, they'd nix the high diving cat act, but otherwise allow the circus back as they had done for 27 of the last 28 years.

The circus has this amazing high diving cat act. A cat climbs up a ladder to fifty feet and dives off a diving board into a pool. No cat act. And so the circus is coming to town without elephants and the high diving cat act.

We also protect little birds. This time of year, the tiny birds known as piping plovers that you see skittering along the beaches, are making their nests in the sand, billing and cooing, laying their eggs and raising their young.

They're a lovely sight to see, and there seems to be hundreds of thousands of them but if you come within ten feet of one, you'll be slapped with a $250 fine. Piping plovers are an endangered species. There's yellow environmental tape on sticks surrounding hundreds of piping plover nesting sites on the beaches from Montauk to Fire Island and there are many beaches blocked off by the yellow tape.

Tiptoe quietly by a piping plover nesting area. The babies may be sleeping.

We also protect seals. If one crawls up on a beach along the ocean, presume he is injured. It is not natural for a seal to crawl up on an ocean beach. So call the seal protection hotline 631-369-9829.

They will send a seal ambulance with sirens and flashing lights out right away and come and deal with it and take it away.

But stay away. They bite.

So we protect and save and cuddle wild animals, and we protect and save and cuddle humans, but somehow, dogs seem to have fallen through the cracks. They are neither fish nor fowl, wild animals or human, and we have inadequate laws for them.

One of the most humiliating things I have ever heard of, if you happen to be a dog, took place last Saturday afternoon at the Southampton Hunt and Polo Club in Water Mill, where on a great green polo field, in front of a huge crowd at halftime, the Southampton Animal Shelter put on display about thirty dogs who need a home. They ran around. They wagged their tails and sniffed each other's butts. They sniffed the horse poop from the first half. They barked and played. And caring members of the assembled crowd, looking at these homeless dogs from afar picked one out, ran out onto the field and — no fighting over the merchandise please — announced they were adopting this particular one. Then, they ran off the field, holding their prize. At least one person, I am sure, probably a young woman in a white dress, a white chiffon scarf and white floppy straw hat, held his or her dog's paw in the air and waved it cutely to the crowd.

How would you like to be set out in front of a thousand people like that?

Is this the Roman Coliseum?

(The Southampton Animal Shelter also has cats. And they did consider cats. But cats on a polo field with dogs and a crowd all around won't work. The cats would be outta there in a flash.)

Never have the people of any society been so ambivalent about animals. We can't decide if we ought to kill them, groom them, eat them, play polo with them — the horses clearly love playing polo — or run on the beach with them.

Dogs will do anything for their humans.

I am writing this sitting in a beach chair at the Indian Wells Beach in Amagansett. With me is my dog. As I approached the beach, I passed, in my car, a big wooden sign that read NO ANIMALS PERMITTED ON THE BEACH 10 AM – 6 PM FROM MAY 15 TO SEPTEMBER 15.

I parked my car. Where you go out on the beach, there is a metal sign. It reads ANIMALS PERMITTED ONLY BEYOND 300' IN EITHER DIRECTION (10AM-6PM) 5/15 TO 9/15.

But a lifeguard told me the dog is permitted May 15 to September 15 500 feet east or west of the road end.

"They changed the law in April," he said. "But they haven't got around to changing the sign."

Thus is the detritus and effluvia of an ongoing fight in Town Hall between dog lovers and dog haters, with the Town Board ever trying to make peace between them.

This was July 16. A gloomy day. Nobody was on the beach. But I moved down 500 feet anyway, counting off the steps.

To Make A Village Or Not Make A Village, That Is The Question

By David Stoll

Discussions about village incorporation are all the rage these days, with proposals in Montauk, Sagaponack, Bridgehampton and, of course, Dunehampton. But is it a good idea to become a village? What are the benefits? What is the down side, to both the village in particular and the East End generally? These questions were addressed in a thoughtful panel discussion hosted by the Hamptons chapter of the League of Women Voters on July 12 at the Parish House of the St. Ann's Episcopal Church. About 40 people attended the 90-minute discussion, including Southampton Town Councilman Dennis Suskind. The League's Ana Daniel moderated. The Village of North Haven's Deputy Mayor Fred Stelle was asked to speak in favor of villages, while former Southampton Town Supervisor Vincent J.

Cannuscio of the Hampton Bays hamlet was asked to speak against villages. But a debate did not evolve, because both agreed that it is sometimes reasonable to become a village, but not for the wrong reasons and not until people

North Haven, a unique and identifiable rural area without a developed business district. In such a place, he said, "home rule" makes sense, because conservation and preservation of the farming and whaling atmosphere are so critical. As an example of home rule in action, he discussed property size. The Town, he said, has a one-size-fits-all rule; the maximum size of a house bears no relation to the size of the property on which it is built. In North Haven, the Trustees passed more restrictive zoning rules to prohibit large houses on small parcels.

He also approved of the greater attention to detail that village officials can offer. Their "narrow focus" yields "targeted results," whereas

Town officials may not see the consequences of their actions in areas of the town with which they are less familiar. And he spoke of the have engaged as active citizens in the town to try to have their interests recognized.

Mr. Stelle cautioned at the outset that his positive view of villages comes from living in pride village residents have in their highly defined sense of place.

Nevertheless, he warned that "village incorporation is not a panacea for higher property taxes." Quite the opposite can be true, because the village is responsible for almost all aspects of government, including police, roads and administrative entities like a zoning board of appeals. Also, there is a temptation in a village to provide extra, more expensive services. To avoid the cost of starting and maintaining a village police department, North Haven has contracted with the Town of Southampton to provide police services, allowing North Haven to benefit from the Town's economy of scale, but the Town is not required to enter into such contracts.

Mr. Stelle also spoke against "nefarious motivations" for becoming a village. He suggested that incorporation is not appropriate to escape Town environmental rules. Indeed, he feels that becoming a village does not abrogate the responsibility to work with the town, and he urged villages to follow the town or adopt even stricter rules that are appropriate to the unique attributes of the village. Obviously referring to Dunehampton, he said that "slicing off the beach and calling it a village is asinine."

Mr. Cannuscio agreed that that there are times when it makes sense to become a village, if a town is not listening to the concerns of the residents of an area, but he said that Southampton Town in his experience was and is responsive, and he singled out Mr. Suskind as a particularly involved representative. He discussed Dunehampton to illustrate his point. The Dunehampton effort followed a proposal for very strict zoning rules concerning beachfront homes. They were so "draconian" in Mr. Cannuscio's view that he would have supported the Dunehampton effort if the proposed rules had been adopted. But they were not; the rules that eventually passed look nothing like the proposal but rather reflected the concerns of many beachfront property owners. The lesson, he said, is that people's needs can be met through an active and involved community, without incurring the financial and administrative burden of village government.

A number of audience questions and comments provoked additional discussion, particularly about Community Advisory Councils (CACs). Mr. Cannuscio said that the Town always listened carefully to the CACs, although naturally did not agree with them in every instance. Mr. Suskind echoed that observation, and advised people to become involved in CACs because he believes the CAC members do not always represent the interests of their constituents. One audience member complained that, while the Southampton Town Board is good at listening to CACs, it fails at keeping the CACs informed.

Mr. Suskind offered some additional thoughts. He agreed with Mr. Cannuscio's comments about Dunehampton. He said that the beachfront rules as proposal were too restrictive (and insisted that they had no chance of passing), and regards the final product as good legislation. Thus, he feels that the Dunehampton proponents are using the rules "as an excuse." (While he did not say so explicitly, the implication was the proponents' real

Car Show

Gadgets You Never Thought Could Be Designed Into A Car

By Matt Stevenson

It is doubtful that many of the entrants in this Sunday's annual Classic and Antique Car Show at the Bridgehampton Historical Society are familiar with "Pimp My Ride," a television program that appears daily on MTV. The Bridgehampton show is a staid convention of middle-aged automotive connoisseurs: a collection of mild-mannered folks who, aside from their reverent, scholarly, and obsessive affinity for the genealogy, production, and mechanics of fine old automobiles, generally lead normal lives. The MTV show, meanwhile, is an offering to the noisy excesses of modern hip-hop culture: a half-hour in which host Exhibit (a washed up old rapper) takes people's "hoopdies" (broken down old cars) to a Los Angeles customizer's, where they are then "pimped" (outfitted with gaudy decorations, like chrome hubcaps and ceiling mounted fish tanks, and extravagant electronics, like DVD players and headrest mounted respect for fine craftsmanship and engineering, the second is governed by the rules of machismo and of the street, in which cardinal virtues are flash, boldness, and, last but not least, a pimp-a-ride.

TV monitors). While the first is negotiated by the code of the gentleman, in which the most prized virtues are a healthy historical curiosity, a spirit of fraternal good fellowship, and a

If nothing else, though, the automobiles at the Bridgehampton show served as evidence that these two contemporary strains in American car culture are originally sprung from the same source. For while the cars on display were not overblown 2005 Cadillac Escalades or tricked-out 1988 Honda Civics, but rather lovingly-restored 1949 Packard Super 8 Victorias and 1957 Chevrolet Bel-Airs, several of them were equipped with the gadgetry, storage compartments, and decorative flourishes that anyone this side of LeBron James would recognize as the typical earmarks of a

The fancy automotive accoutrements that bulged and shined from the thirty or so classic cars at the Bridgehampton show (the turnout, lower than expected, was affected by the weather) could mainly be divided into two varieties: those that were originally part of the car, as standard features offered by the manufacturer, and those that were added later, by individual owners, mechanics, and customizers. But with all of the restoration and replication that had gone into even the most authenticated pieces of machinery on the field by Montauk Highway that afternoon, this divide, though a useful guideline, is often blurred to the point of obscurity.

In the way of original gadgetry, several of the cars at the show boasted unique and unusual accessories that had been a part of them since the time of their production. Among the lush appointments on the interior of a 1920 Cadillac Victoria Coupe, for example, were tafetta-roller sunshades on each of the rear windows, a set of handsome theater-style interior lamps in the corners above the velvet-upholstered backseat, and an electric cigar lighter in the front dash (a sort of novelty in its day, whose praises were once sung by George F. Babbitt of Sinclair Lewis's famous novel). Anthony Fiorentino's 57 Bel Air, meanwhile, which he referred to as "the quintessential 50s car," came both with a chrome tissue holder on a swivel head that was mounted beneath the dash and a natural air conditioning system which fed a stream of fresh air from an opening in the grillwork into the car through a channel under the hood. Another personal favorite, which was not on any of the cars at the show but which several owners were eager to talk about, was a golf-club storage compartment beneath the rear seat of the early '30's Packard. This extravagant tribute to upper-class male sporting culture was accessed through a little door in the side panel in the years between 1931 and 1934, but was discontinued after a short life, as were many of the cost-inefficient luxuries of early American autos.

Of the custom built variety were several features that were equally lovable, comparably quirky, and no less extravagant. Accenting the floor of Arthur French's thoroughly re-vamped 1951 Mercury, for example, was a sparkling chrome foot where a gas pedal used to be; in the trunk, the spare tire was draped in wine-colored velvet. But here, again, the distinction between the truly antique and the old-but-reimagined began to fade. The battery to Clive Doyle's beautiful 1914 Rolls Royce sat in a brass-trimmed hardwood box on the running board which was comparable to the external battery containers of the day, but which was not a replica but an antique that Mr. Doyle picked up off eBay. Mr. Doyle's entire hybrid automobile, which combined a body that Mr. Doyle had himself designed after the French racing cars of the 1910s, an original but adjusted 1920s Rolls Royce chassis, and an engine made for a WWI aircraft by Hispano Suiza, is itself a study in the inextricable links between the different ideals of using only original parts, using any means to pursue an original aesthetic, and using one's artistic sensibilities to design an automobile with a unique, individual appeal.

These many different ideals and techniques in classic car restoration can be roughly resolved, for convenience's sake, into two distinct but of course interrelated philosophies, which I will dub the Hemming Motor News school (after a popular trade journal used by classic car junkies) and the proto-Pimp My Ride school. I met vocal representatives of each school at the show on Sunday.

"There are a lot of old cars that you can't find in their original form anymore," lamented Stanley Redlus, the owner of a beautiful, meticulously restored 1949 Packard Super 8 Victoria. "So many old roadsters were taken by people in the 50s and chopped up to make drag racers, like in the Beach Boys songs. You look at that truck over there: it used to be a Cadillac coupe, but somebody chopped 8 inches off the roof, dropped a big block engine under the hood, and put a flatbed on the back. That's a really interesting hobby, but it's not my game."

"You see this truck," said a starry-eyed Mr.

The Swedish Invasion

Swedish Students Are Here And Enrolled At Southampton College

By JB McGeever

The campus at Southampton College is alive with Swedes, studying in the classrooms, eating in the cafeteria, playing on the athletic fields. During soccer season, for instance, a typical conversation between male members of the graduate writing program, of which I am a member, might go something like this:

"I have to get going."

"How come?"

"The women's soccer team is playing."

"I understand completely."

Sweden doesn't suffer the tenuous relationship between education and sport. Student-athletes don't represent their schools; they play for independent clubs, enabling them to come to the States with their eligibility intact. As a result, there are so many Swedes on the playing fields of Southampton, so many blond ponytails swishing in the sun, that coaches must occasionally instruct players through the use of an interpreter.

Not all Swedish students are soccer players, of course, and not all of them resemble Tiger until an African-Swede smiles your way.

I must admit, prior to going to school at Southampton, everything I knew about Sweden I pretty much learned from the "Muppet Show." There was this one character, the Swedish Chef, whose specialty, of course, was meatballs, although I don't think he ever got around to actually making any. He wore a big white hat, a burly mustache, and spoke in a series of heavy breathing H-sounds. His gibberish grew louder and more intense with every fallen soufflé and eventual oven explosion. It turns out, however, that Swedes don't sound anything like this.

As I grew older and fell into a certain demographic, the Swedish Bikini Team was promised to me. These thong-clad descendants of Thor were mine for the taking as long as I promised to drink myself into an alcoholic stupor between kick-offs and half-times.

Last spring, two of the Swedes, Lars and Sven, let's say, were working on a project. They handed out copies of a blank map of Europe. We were to fill in all the countries, proving to our visitors that we knew where they lived. "The Stupid American Poll" is what we called it and we didn't appreciate it at all.

Fine, I thought. I knew where Scandinavia was, draped over Northern Europe like overlapping versions of Florida without the palm trees and shuffleboard. I labeled Sweden as Finland, and Finland as Sweden. Denmark and Norway factored in somewhere, but my pencil drew its own conclusions. I ended up re-writing European History.

"What's the matter?" Lars said, watching my eyes burn holes into the paper.

"Having some trouble, eh?" said Sven.

They asked to meet up with me once the results were in. Could I assist with the editing, perhaps? There was nothing malicious in their final report. There was really nothing untrue. They had worked hard on their project. They were good students. I made sure every line was perfect.

Many students at Southampton inhabit the large rentals in the school's vicinity until the summer season begins. I recently had an opportunity to visit one of the "Swedish Houses," snowy white heads bent over laptops in the common area, a large flag of Sweden's gold cross and blue landscape on the wall watching over them. I took all of this in, thinking, finally, the mountaintop!

Some of the ladies had just returned from a trip to Miami Beach and were trying to decide which water frolicking photos they liked best. "I know, I know," one of them said, handing a stack to me, "The Swedish Bikini Team, right? We know all about that."

I burrowed myself into a corner with the pictures, as the subject of next year's soccer captains came up. "What?" an exasperated voice said. "An American? They actually picked an Uh-merry-can?!"

I began to plan my escape. It was really nothing more than pride, competitive spirit, and nationalism, but I still felt a bit awkward, and as the topic grew more intense, totally invisible. "Um, hi, helloooooo?" I contemplated saying, thinking maybe a peace offering would be the best way to go. "There's an American sitting on your floor right now, eating a Big Mac. In a moment, he'll be tearing into a candy bar approximately the size of a small baseball bat, if anyone would care to join him." But they were obviously in training for the upcoming season so I kept my mouth full and shut.

This precarious situation, however, did not prevent me from bragging to my writing cohorts the next time I went to work at the tutoring center. "My brothers," I began, "I have seen The House of Sweden, and it is good..."

By Matt Stevenson

Kevin Sorbo is not a really a demi-God; he just played one on T.V. Still, it is difficult for anyone who has studied his biography or even looked at his photograph to imagine him doing anything on a less than epic scale. Standing 6' 3", bestriding the worlds of modeling and syndicated television like a colossus, recent father to a son born at a Herculean 12 lbs., 6 oz., Sorbo's career and bearing exude an aura of size, grandness, and assuredness, and, like the pieces in the "Hamptons Dining Collection" he recently designed for Boyd Furniture, "give off the sense of an almost medieval strength." So it is unsurprising that it was at his expansive house, at 772 Middle Line Highway in Bridgehampton, that he played host to some of the biggest and loudest parties in Hamptons history this Fourth of July weekend.

To be fair, Sorbo and his family had little to do with the festivities that took place at their house that weekend, which included both the party that launched Paris Hilton's new record label and Sean "P. Diddy" Combs's annual "White Party." In reality they were the work of Combs, Hilton, a host of promoters, and PlayStation 2, the video game giant that rented the Sorbos' house in order to officially host and sponsor the events. But even at a remove, the association of these colossally big parties, which have drawn obligatory but not-undeserving comparisons to the mythic parties of Jay Gatsby, with Kevin Sorbo, a television actor who has known mythic success as a portrayer of mythological heroes, makes a sort of perfect thematic sense.

Kevin Sorbo, like Jay Gatsby, was born in Minnesota near the headwaters of the Mississippi River, on September 24, 1958. Like the Superman character he nearly played on TNT's "Lois and Clark: The New Adventures of Superman," he was raised in a small town under simple circumstances; in Sorbo's case it was a Minneapolis suburb of 8,000 called Mound (in which there is now a street called Sorbo Lane), by a middle school math teacher named Ardis and a nurse named Lynn. He starred in football, basketball, baseball and hockey in high school and was a self-described "big jock" in his early years, a fact that many of his many avid German fans (there are nearly as many Kevin Sorbo websites in German as there are in English) find so American and so Sorbo. And there is indeed something striking

But Sorbo's personal presence always kept an air of dignity about Hercules...

---

about Sorbo's wholesome ruggedness, his meteoric rise to superstardom from obscurity, and his unironic heroes that make him seem particularly American among the pantheon of American celebrity.

With a quaintness one would expect of an American epic hero, Kevin caught the acting bug at age eleven while watching his brother perform in a community production of Oklahoma! Though he continued to play competitive sports through college (and play them well enough to entertain dreams of being a catcher for the Minnesota Twins), he knew that he wanted to be an actor from this early point forward, and pursued that dream instead. He participated in numerous theatrical productions in his college years and, after graduating, moved to Dallas in search of fame.

"I was definitely daunted by New York," he has said, "and I'd heard the L.A. story too many times, so I figured I'd try my luck down in Texas."

Sorbo was reasonably successful in Dallas, garnering his first speaking television part in one of the many guest appearances he made in the series that bears the city's name. But the gods had bigger things in mind for him. And so with encouragement from a girlfriend who was traveling to Europe for a modeling gig, Sorbo made a journey overseas from which he would not return until after his 28th birthday.

It was on this foreign odyssey that he would get his first taste of true fame, as a model and an actor in a famous Australian ad campaign for Jim Beam Whiskey. In one commercial, Sorbo plays a taciturn cowboy whose one utterance, a stern "This ain't Jim Beam," delivered after an unsatisfactory sip of imposter whiskey, is still lovingly quoted by many Aussies. He did not, as is sometimes believed, spend his time abroad wandering across unfriendly seas for ten years, searching for home; that was someone else.

Instead Sorbo returned to the States after a mere five years, in 1986, and moved to Los Angeles, where work as both a model and an actor began to come more easily. He earned recurring guest roles on the television series "The Commish" and "Murder, She Wrote," and became a spokesmodel in a long-running and memorable T. V. ad campaign for Pert Plus shampoo. Then, in 1993, Kevin got his big break; he was cast for the lead role in a series of five 2-hour television movies about Hercules. They aired in syndication the following year, all across the country, and were widely watched.

The success of the T.V. movie series brought Sorbo in 1994 to the sort of crossroads that is encountered by every epic hero on his quest for fame. Encouraged by his performance as Hercules, TNT offered Sorbo the role of Superman in its new series "Lois and Clark." Fox also contacted Sorbo, considering him for the role of Fox Mulder on "The X-Files." But it was an offer from the fledgling Warner Brothers network, a new conglomerate of many of the same local, syndication-driven channels that had shown the five Hercules movies, which intrigued Sorbo the most; the WB wanted Sorbo to continue playing Hercules for a full season of hour-long episodes. After careful consideration, Sorbo went with the WB.

It proved to be the right decision. While "Lois and Clark" fizzled out after middling success and "The X-Files" gained as much tabloid notoriety as it did television success, "Hercules: The Legendary Journeys" became the number one show in syndication for the six years between 1995 and 2000, and prompted a series of popular spinoffs, most notably "Beastmaster" and "Xena: Warrior Princess." The WB, on the strength of a creative lineup that featured hits from the popular new mytho-adventure genre that "Hercules" essentially founded, became the hottest thing on television during the brief post-Seinfeld/pre-reality show era of the late 90s. And Sorbo, for his part, became a huge star; he is largely considered the third most bankable name in television, behind only Regis Philbin and Oprah Winfrey, and has a huge, dedicated fanbase who still flock to his every autograph signing and charity appearance.

Yet Sorbo's current status as a larger-than-life cultural icon may derive less from his tremendous success than from the uncomplicated and unironic greatness of the character he portrayed. The Hercules of "The Legendary Journeys" could be little other than a cartoonishly overblown hero, and the writing of the episodes left little to the imagination. In the first episode, according to a synopsis provided by the SciFi network, "Hercules forsakes his kind ways and blindly seeks retribution when a vengeful Hera slays his family, until he is moved to rescue a helpless village from a demonic snake woman." In the second, Sorbo's character "makes peace between a group of angry villagers and a misunderstood Cyclops." In the third, he "defends a band of travelers from a monstrous, pterodactyl-like bird." But Sorbo's personal presence always kept an air of dignity about Hercules, and reeled the show's Olympus-sized plotlines in to just-this-side of ridiculousness. For all of the dramatic talent that is concentrated in the Hamptons, there are not many who could have carried a role of those proportions.

Sorbo and his wife Sandra built their large house in Bridgehampton near the end of "Hercules's" successful run, but have spent little time there with their sons Braeden and Shane (the twelve-pounder, who was born in March) in the years since; the demands of Sorbo's new show, "Gene Roddenbury's Andromeda," and the charity group that he chairs, A World Fit for Kids (in which at risk teens develop self-confidence by mentoring younger children), bring them to Vancouver and Las Vegas, respectively, for the better part of each year. ("Andromeda" is also a number-one syndicated hit on the WB, in which Sorbo plays a spaceship captain with a heroic responsibilities similar to those of Hercules.) But though they have, of course, rented the house for much of the summer, and are reportedly testing the real estate market, the Hamptons hold an unmistakably special place in the hearts of Kevin and Sandra Sorbo nonetheless; drawing on inspiration from the regional landscape, they have designed a bedroom and dining set for Boyd Furniture called "The Hamptons Collection." Hewn from hardwood and "ancient iron," the pieces are said to "combine the warmth of world traditions and the constantly moving energy of nature's elements, earth, wood, and minerals, to create a collection which exudes unmistakable presence." From the man who played Hercules, one would expect nothing less.

we had two hours to kill and I decided we ought to go to the dock at Boys and Girls Harbor, first to pay our respects and also to have something to eat. In the confusion with the impounded boat, we had forgotten to eat. Mark asked if we had tickets. I told him that was no problem. I had been going to the dock for years, was a friend of the family and had an open invitation to their party.

"They have hot dogs and sliced ham, potato salad and ice cream, stuff like that," I told Mark and Chris.

We got to the dock and tied up. Dusk was settling in. I led the others to the wooden stairs that lead up to the party, and there was a uniformed security guard with his arms folded, holding a walkie talkie. This was the first time I'd ever seen a security guard down by the dock.

"It's okay," I told him.

"It's not okay," he said. "Nobody's allowed past without a wrist bracelet."

I told him I could get a wrist bracelet at the top of the steps. All I had to do was see anybody I knew and they could get me one. He said too bad. He was like a nightclub bouncer. I wasn't getting anywhere.

"What if I leave Chris and Mark here as hostages," I said. "Also Mark is bleeding. He needs a new bandage."

Mark and Chris were looking out into the harbor where maybe five thousand sandwiches and three thousand beverages were aboard a thousand brightly lit boats bobbing at anchor.

"Sorry," he said. "You'll have to go around to the entrance to the camp. That's where the table is."

He was asking me to take the half hour sail through the thousand assembled boats across the harbor to Gann Road where we had come from, drive through horrendous traffic for a half hour back around the harbor, park and walk to a table located about one hundred yards from where we were standing on the dock.

"Why can't you be normal?" Mark asked the security guard. There was no answer.

Then I remembered that Winnie Hatch was in charge of the wrist bracelet table. Winnie and I are neighbors. We've played golf together. I collared somebody with a wrist bracelet walking down the dock and asked them to please find her and call the gestapo. And that's how we got in.

From 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. was indeed a wonderful, wonderful experience. We had something to eat, borrowed a flashlight, courtesy of Bill Pickens, one of the members of the Board of Directors of Boys and Girls Harbor, and we returned to the boat and chugged out maybe two hundred yards into the harbor to the front row of the boats nearest the barge, and from this ringside seat waited for the beginning of this most incredible fireworks performance. The display would be set to music, broadcast over loudspeakers at the camp, and also simulcast on WLNG, 92.1 FM. The fireworks would be narrated by Jimmy Lipton, the TV host, stepping in for the late George Plimpton. Plimpton had narrated for twenty five years. And this year's display was dedicated to him.

As for the fireworks themselves, they would be, as always, the work of the Grucci Brothers, who use the occasion of these Bastille Day Fireworks to try out every new experimental rocket that comes into their arsenal. Grucci has been the winner of the Monte Carlo Fireworks Competition, the greatest competition of its kind in the world.

So it began. The rockets went up, just one at a time at first, exploding with a thunderous sound that mirrored on the surface of the water and echoed through the harbor, then fell gently and colorfully down. After a few of these, the pace accelerated, and they began streaming up into the night sky overhead in groups. There were great banging thunderclaps. We were so close, we could feel the heat. The sound, coming moments later, put our hair on end, and the echo off the far shore sent great, glittering silvers and golds shimmering down, some of them sizzling into the harbor itself.

Twenty five minutes into the display, over the loud speaker, there came this recorded announcement — a tape made of George Plimpton announcing several years ago.

"And now, hold onto your hats and enjoy the famous Gucci Brothers Grand Finale to the Fireworks here at Boys and Girls Harbor."

The world trembled at the incredible fusillade of rockets that followed. It went on and on, until finally, after one great twenty second-spasm of record rocketry, there was silence. A sudden, quiet silence. And nothing moved.

And then, one by one, the yachtsman in the Harbor began sounding their boat horns, until it became this unbelievable celebration of appreciation for what the Boys and Girls Harbor had done. When that ended, throughout the harbor, there were cheers. Then silence again. It was over.

At this point, about half the yachtsmen stayed to party on, while the other half pulled anchor and turned their boats slowly to chug off at five knots to the jetty or to their slips.

Moving slowly and silently across Three Mile Harbor in the dark, we kept our eyes open and the flashlights on to try to avoid the other boats. This was a very dangerous business. We went carefully. And then, just a few hundred yards from the town marina — I had elected to go home to see if I could park in my slip — the engine coughed and died. Just like that. I tried to restart it. Nothing. I tried again. Still nothing. We started drifting toward shore. Soon we would be aground. If we weren't broadsided first.

"Fend off anything that comes," I shouted, realizing after I did it how stupid this sounded.

Boats were everywhere. It was like the Montauk Highway on the Fourth of July, except the procession had parking lights on, not headlights, and was going every which way without benefit of roads. Also, we were in boats. And so we started yelling. After a few boats went by, apparently thinking we were re-living the fireworks experience — hey, that sure was great! — one saw we were in trouble and came over to see what we were shouting about. They threw us a line. And so that's how we got home.

At the present time, my old boat is tied up to the side of a bulkhead about one hundred yards from the slip that I think is mine. In my slip is a ship from the East Hampton Town Waterways Authority. It has a decal to that effect on the side. None of the other slips are free, either. Saturday night, we walked home, and then had to drive to Gann Road to get the other car.

And that's how we celebrated Boys and Girls Harbor's Bastille Day this past Saturday. I'll mail back the flashlight. Enclose a gift. Tony Duke founded this camp 66 years ago, when he was a teenager. An amazing achievement. Boys and Girls Harbor has an office in Manhattan, seven venues in the City in addition to the camp in East Hampton, and has helped over 44,000 disadvantaged youths since its founding.

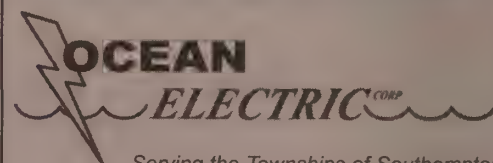

Next year it will be better, if that's possible. No boat thefts, police impounds, bleeding boatmates, guest hostages, broken engines. It could happen. • lawyer, leaving a meeting with the Southampton Town Board having declined to compromise about a 50 home subdivision proposal that would knock out a farm, shouting in unison "Buy it! Buy it!" as they left. They laughed as they slammed the door behind them. They knew the town couldn't afford it.

The issue really is whether there are any ethics involved in business in America. The capitalist system is wonderful. But left unfettered, at its worst, it goes about its business with no moral compass. And that's where government comes in. About ten years ago the local governments decided how we go about this in a hot real estate market is to put a 2% real estate tax on all real estate transactions over $250,000. Huge sums of money have come in because of this, on the order of $15,000,000 a year. And in these ten years, with this money, I am told that in Southampton, just about every piece of valuable open land over 20 acres has been saved. East Hampton is not far behind. "Buy it" they are. And our beautiful, natural world out here will be better for it.

I am in favor of the capitalistic system. And I like to think there is such a thing as an enlightened capitalist just as I'd like to think there are enlightened public officials. Play by some rules. The Republicans lean to the right.

The Democrats lean to the left. Certainly too far to the left has been shown to get us buried under paperwork.

But when people behave like robber barons, play catch-me-if-you-can and then get caught at it they get what they deserve. It just can't be any other way. That is not the America I know.

I don't know if you saw this, but the White House recently released a note they intercepted, sent by an American Al Qaeda operative back to Saudi Arabia. "All they care about is their cars and what salacious matter is on TV. Otherwise their lives are barren."

And that's not the America I know either. •

review: ashley montana

By Craig Platt

To try and review Roger Rosenblatt with a critical eye is like welcoming a lion into dinner and wearing a steak suit. Rosenblatt is one of the most clever writers of recent memory and his essays almost always incite laughter and thought. The staging of Ashley Montana Goes Ashore in the Caicos or What am I Doing Here? at the Southampton College Writer's Conference was like hearing Roger's essays in stereo. The staged reading had a backdrop of the Sports Illustrated cover complete with the text that inspired the story and the actors all took their cues from the tone of the piece and added life to the already lively voice of Rosenblatt's essays.

What is astounding about Rosenblatt is that such a brilliant writer can make such nonsensical things make so much sense in such a cryptic way. Rosenblatt believes that the secret to a successful essay is in the digression. Rosenblatt is the king of digression. If there were a U.S. Digresser Laureate it would be Roger Rosenblatt. Through digressions, Rosenblatt hypnotizes his reader. Or better yet, he takes them on a search for buried treasure. In a mind cluttered with reality television, popular movies, jazz music, and liberal politics, he explores what he is doing here.

Where? You might ask. Here, Rosenblatt might respond. Here? You might ask. Where? Rosenblatt might respond.

That is it. A clever path to the singular truth, that there is no singular truth and absolutely no logic to most of the things we see, hear, read, or ingest.

A favorite part is when a New York City poet is reading signs in the window of a closed store. The brilliance of it is that this poet is reading everything literally. Intelligent people, or maybe non hip to the secret of life in modern day, see words and grammar and read them as they were trained. What follows is a hilarious misinterpretation of several signs looking for fairly typical things, like a roommate.

Another scene that prompted the audience to laugh out loud was a spoof of morning television shows. As things escalated from worse to worst, the newscasters kept smiling faces and bright voices while reporting that Adolph Hitler had been discovered alive in the Andes Mountains speaking with a Castilian accent and prepping for an interview in a few moments. Then in brighter news, how will this influence the presidential election? "Well the people who aren't going to vote for the president, will not vote for the president and the people who will vote for the president will still vote for the president and the people who are undecided could go either way."

What does the president or Hitler or any of this have to do with Ashley Montana, the Caicos Islands, or what we're all doing here? Something – just not something obvious.

Something beneath the surface, something lurking, something dreaded and dastardly and eating at the fabric of our society or at least our favorite dinner jacket.

Rosenblatt did take his opportunity to pipe up about his politics and the current state of the world. Politics and the state of the world have him wondering what the hell he is doing here. One of the best lines of the night was something to this effect: Conservatives are around to conserve all the changes the liberals make, so I don't know why every one is complaining.

Writing a review of Rosenblatt makes me nervous. It had me hoping I could memorize every line as it was spoken, it was making me hope that I could quote someone famous and poignant. But I was there and the room was hot and the actors were funny and the crowd was clapping, and all I could think about was whether I had remembered to turn the sprinkler off before I left the house and whether I had remembered to put deodorant on or maybe I thought about my pen in my pocket or if putting my feet up was inappropriate. And then I thought, what am I doing here? And I thought do I smell? And then Ashley Caicos came and went ashore somewhere in Montana and I knew exactly where I was. I was a little baffled about where I was going. No matter how confused Rosenblatt gets with where he is, he somehow always gets where he is going.

New Restylane® - just FDA approved - does for lower face areas what Botox does for the upper. Works instantly to give both fuller, younger-looking lips and smooth away those confidence-destroying "Marionette"-Deep crag lines that frame your mouth area. They say "the eyes are the window of the soul." Now your mouth area can live up on the outside to the beauty you already have inside. Lasts 6-12 months before a "freshe-up" treatment.

The Town of East Hampton has a booklet called EAST HAMPTON TOWN DOG CONTROL LAW.

Here are some excerpts from this book:

No person shall beat, cruelly ill-treat, torment, overload, overwork or otherwise abuse an animal or cause, instigate or permit any dogfight, cockfight, bullfight or other combat between animals and humans.

It shall be unlawful for any owner of a dog to allow or permit such dog to 1. disturb the comfort, peace or repose of any person in the vicinity by unreasonable noise, 2. habitually chase or run alongside of motor vehicles, bicycles, joggers or pedestrians, 3. chase or otherwise harass any person in such a manner as to cause reasonable intimidation or to put such person in reasonable apprehension of bodily harm or injury, 4. endanger itself, or 5. cause damage or destruction to property or commit a nuisance upon the premises of a person Other Than The Owner Of Such Dog. (my italic.)

No performing animal exhibition shall be permitted in which animals are induced or encouraged to perform through the use of chemical, mechanical, electrical or manual devices in a manner which will cause or is likely to cause physical injury or suffering.

(I wonder how they encourage the high diving cat? Cat treat up at the top of the ladder? Another on a stick just over the pool he can snatch as he whizzes by?)

See you at polo.

French a few hours later, beckoning me to come over and look at the same automobile again. "It used to be a Cadillac, but someone dropped a big block engine in it, sawed a few inches off the top, and put a flat bed in back. That thing can probably do 150 now."

Leading me back to his own car, he elaborated wistfully. "I've had it since I was 25 years old. It has a Merc body with Buick headlamps, a Merc Engine, and a Cadillac grill. It's the only true American art form, customizing cars. And it's dying out. Nobody does this anymore."

With rap music, another true American art form, in mind, I considered inviting him to watch an episode of "Pimp My Ride." But not wanting to come off as disrespectful to what was truly a beautiful automobile, I finally thought better of it.

review: walk with the people

By Jarra Gruen

As I pulled up to the Shinnecock Nation Cultural Center and Museum, I saw a sight that is very hard to come by these days: dozens of smiling families from various generations sitting together enjoying a delicious meal. People from all over the Long Island community had come out to enjoy the Second Annual Shinnecock Museum festival on that cloudless Saturday afternoon. I felt a very real sense of togetherness, as the delicious fragrances drifting from the grill pulled me onto the lawn in front of the log museum. As I walked amidst the tents, watching the various families enjoying their home-cooked lobster, clams and corn, I realized how rare a phenomenon I was actually witnessing.

In the year 2004, it has become increasingly difficult to get a family of four to sit ten minutes together, let alone for an entire meal. However, this did not seem to be a problem on that bright afternoon. "We want the Shinnecock sense of community to come back to Long Island, that is why we hold festivals like this one," Elizabeth Thunderbird Haile, a Shinnecock tribal member and co-founder of the museum explained to me. Judging from the content, smiling families dotting the lawn, she definitely achieved her goal. Placed on Shinnecock territory, where over 400 tribal members still live today, the museum's exhibit, fondly named, "A Walk With The People," has been bringing people together all over the East End and is quickly becoming an important part of the community. I could tell Elizabeth was eager to show me the museum and I asked her for the grand tour. With a proud smile, she agreed.

As I stepped through the hand-carved wooden door, I welcomed the cool, pine-scented air within. Ed Garret, a Shinnecock and ex-dentist from Manhattan (now lovingly nicknamed "the dentist" by fellow tribesmembers) decided to accompany us on the tour as well. The tall, grandfatherly man, clad in a baseball hat, Nikes, and a beautiful ancient-looking bone necklace, was the perfect combination of relaxed Hampton lifestyle and Shinnecock tradition. "Aren't these beautiful?" Ed asked proudly as he pointed to the various murals of Shinnecock members lining the walls. And they were. The brightly colored paintings of people whaling, hunting and performing traditional ceremonies on the virgin Long Island soil illustrates their respect for the land. "Life was good in those days," Ed said quietly, studying the pictures with a sad, reminiscent smile on his face.

The rest of the artifacts and specimens in the museum were equally interesting. Both Ed and Elizabeth had pictures of various an-

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #308

The Magical Mystery Tour...

My gal pal Carolyn Denning (from Lifestyles of the Thin and Beautiful) called me because she hates me and likes to torture me, so she told me all about the Shelter Island Heights Historic House Tour. It's Saturday July 24, 1 to 5 p.m. rain or shine. For $35 you get to tour five of the most gorgeous homes on the island, proceeds to the Shelter Island Historic Society. Call Carolyn at 749-2315 for tickets.

The first home is the Millard Home. The flyer says, "Tea on a stunning Victorian porch, with breathtaking views." I bet it'll be breathtaking! It's on Bluff Ave, that means I'll have to call Big Red for tow up the hill! For those of us with asthma, this will be a BYON (Bring Your Own Nebulizer) event. At least getting down will be easy. Just line up with your car, lie down and roll.

The second home is the Pribor Home, "Stately taupe and white corner historic home, beautifully restored." This one overlooks the Yacht Club. I can't wait to see this one because it will save me time. I can tour a gorgeous home I can't have, and look at gorgeous boats I can't have, all at the same time. They're not serving tea, they're serving crying towels...

The third home is the Cohen Home, painted Pistachio green! These are my kinda people! "Delightful and eclectic, green Victorian country cottage." I love this house. I applaud their courage to force a traditional and non-traditional milieu into a shotgun wedding. Do not miss this house if you take the tour.

My plan, after I buy Shelter Island, is to have this house towed to the highest point on Ram Island and live in it. And I'll make my mother live with me to avenge my childhood because she never let me wear bright colors. She once said to me, "I thought I'd paint three walls in Vanilla Creme and the fourth in Beach Sand for contrast. The couch is ecru, I think that will all work together nicely." Years passed, and then one day on the phone I got to say to her, "I thought I'd paint three walls in Spring Grass Green and the fourth in Peacock Blue for contrast. The couch is red, I think that will all work together nicely." I could hear her hit the floor. Beige, Ecru, Off White, Eggshell, Taupe, Sand. These are all just variations of what I call Primer Coat.

The fourth home is the Miller Home, described as "Charming, cozy, pink Victorian cottage, recently redone." Carolyn says this is her favorite, she calls it, "pretty in pink," so it must be elegant and tasteful. I guess that rules out the pink being in the Pepto Bismol range...

The fifth home is the Reich Home, described as, "Divine country home, with marvelous watercolor paintings and collectibles." Go on the tour by all means, but do not, I repeat, do not go in this house. I have been inside there and survived to tell the tale. It has appeared in magazines because of its perfection. This is the home of the artist Olive Reich and walking into it is like living inside one of her paintings, glorious colors in perfect balance. I can never go in there again unless I bring someone with me who is CPR certified...

I think all these people are wonderful to open their homes for strangers to tour. They are reaping the harvest of their labor by living in these beautiful homes and I say G-d bless 'em! I'd also like to mention that I am available for adoption or marriage if any of these home owners need an additional relative. I just need room for my computer, jigsaw puzzles and quilting materials. Half the house should do nicely...

Rule (continued from page 32)

motivation is to separate the beach from the rest of the Hamptons.) He said more generally that he and others on the Town Board always return calls and work hard to listen to and address people's concerns.

He also cautioned that in a small village, neighbors end up zoning neighbors, which can lead to strife. In addition, he said that village proponents should consider what will happen a generation later; future village governments might not share the same values as those of the village proponents. Ms. Daniel agreed, pointing to the fact that the current proponents of a Montauk village appear to have different, more development-oriented interests than did the previous proponents of a Montauk village several years ago.

One issue not discussed was the tension that can arise between waterfront villages on the East End and the Trustees. During colonial times, Governor Dongan, the British King's representative for what we now think of as the East End, granted the beaches and other waters in Southampton and East Hampton to the Southampton Trustees and East Hampton Trustees, to hold and manage for the people of the Hamptons. Because these grants and the power of the Trustees are still recognized by the courts today, a village cannot deprive town people access to the beaches, nor can it regulate village beaches in a way that is inconsistent with the rules of the Trustees.

The final part of the discussion involved community housing. At first, the issue was raised in the context of villages. Some expressed concern that village proponents may have the (allegedly) improper motivation to avoid having nearby property dedicated to affordable housing. But Mr. Stelle said that North Haven, which is economically diverse and has many full-time residents, is trying to address the problem. He observed that, while North Haven has not found a solution yet, neither has the Town, so he felt that it would be unfair to criticize villages in particular. Unfortunately, the discussion then degenerated into a somewhat self-congratulatory series of statements by the panelists and audience members alike, stressing how much they support affordable housing and tsk-tsking the fact that, in Mr. Suskind's words, the "majority of the community doesn't want to see it happen." There was no recognition of the difficulties of the issue, not the least of which is the tension between building affordable housing and the desire to have strict land preservation rules.

Nevertheless, the major theme of the discussion — that people should, in Mr. Stelle's words, exercise their "duty of participation and citizenship" in town government (and not just during a crisis), before running off to form a village — was valuable and worthy of further discussion. The alternative, as Ms. Daniel pointed out, would be an unfortunate Balkanization of the Hamptons, even though "we are all connected."

cestors hanging on the walls. There were also a number of gorgeous, bronze statues made by artist Dave McGary that truly depict the Native American lifestyle and the beauty and creativity their people possess. These valuable and surprisingly majestic sculptures make the trip to the Southampton museum worth it, if only for that.

As I was led out of the museum and into the heat of the afternoon sun, Elizabeth explained how the tribe is struggling to get more people to pull off of the busy Montauk Highway in order to experience all that the museum has to offer. It seems that many forget that there is an entire history before "The Hamptons" became what it is today. Even I am guilty of this. Since its opening in 2001, I have always passed the museum without a second glance, never realizing how beautiful, rich, or important the Shinnecock's past really is. However, after spending some time with Ed and Elizabeth, I realized how vital it is to keep Long Island's past alive by continuing to support and spread the traditions of a people that have been working hard to strengthen our own community. It is important that we embrace and learn from the Shinnecock culture as they have from ours.

As I followed Ed and Elizabeth back through the maze of happy picnickers, a number of Shinnecock dancers and drummers began to entertain the crowd. As the enchanting drumbeat picked up the pace and the dancers began to twist and bow, it no longer mattered how life for the Shinnecoeks has changed. It is only important that the Long Island community helps support the museum so festivals like the one I attended can continue and improve every year. As I watched the festivities, I remembered something Elizabeth said while we were discussing why the museum was founded: "We are still here," she told me, her traditional turquoise earrings swaying back and forth, "despite all adversity we had to face, and now it is time for us to tell our side of the story."

Giddy Up

The Stella Adler Studio of Acting and Barbara and Bunky Hearst co-hosted with Roy Scheider and his wife Brenda, the ultimate Friday night cocktail-performance party that included reminiscences of Marlon Brando by Stella's daughter Ellen Adler. "We were sweethearts," Ellen said, a bit teary eyed. Tom Oppenheim, Ellen's son and Artistic Director of The Studio said, "Marlon was like a father to me – always there to give advice, professional and personal." Recent graduates from The Studio Casey Wilson and June Raphael performed a wacky fast paced send up of upper middle class values, "It's So Lovely to be a White Girl" from their long running downtown hit "Rode Hard and Put Away Wet." Sixteen year-old Luz Portillo performed a heart-wrenching monologue from Shakespeare's "Coriolanus". Al Pacino, who starred with Brando in The Godfather, will accept the award at The Studio's November 8th Gala Stella by Starlight to be held at The Pierre Hotel in New York City. The 2004 Mercedes-Benz Polo Challenge kicked off this past weekend at The Bridgehampton Polo Club benefiting The South Fork Breast Health Coalition. "We're back!" shouted Elania Scotto who was personally passing out Fresco By Scotto edibles alongside her sister, Fox 5's Rosanna Scotto under the VIP tent to "Law and Order" actress Elisabeth Rohm, NY 1's Neil Rosen, Jean-Luc Kleefield, Star Jones and Al Reynolds. Actress Jessica Alba officially kicked off the Polo matches by throwing the first ball out into the field. Alba was sporting a twenty-carat heart shaped diamond ring that was on loan to her by Jacob the Jeweler. Alba is a busy girl, working on several films that are coming out soon, including Into the Blue with Paul Walker where she literally swims with ten-foot sharks wearing only a bathing suit. Yet starring in Sin City, with some serious contenders including Benecio Del Toro, Clive Owen, Josh Hartnett and Bruce Willis, seemed to be her favorite role. "It was a little intimidating cause I had to kiss Bruce Willis. I had to be madly in love with him and I remember him from you Moonlighting and it was weird, cause I, like, kept getting these weird flashbacks of Moonlighting." Alba nervously giggling and added, "We kissed a lot. There were many takes. It was good, it was wonderful." Of course he's a good kisser, Demi Moore is nobody's fool. Just look at her taste in men. During the award ceremony the players had a ball being photographed with Alba, especially nineteen-year old Argentinean MVP Tomas Franco who told me, "It's great to be here and I'm just enjoying it." If you are feeling left out, don't worry. You have five more Saturdays to get a taste of the Polo experience. After an outfit change, preferably something black and white, Hamptonites hurried over to The Parrish Art Museum, to Southampton's Midsummer Black and White Gala. Lorraine Bracco was decked out in diamonds by Gilan Jewelers and danced the night away next to Kathy and Rick Hilton, Amanda Hearst, Lydia Hearst-Shaw, Dr. Howard Sobel, Bradford Rand, Richard Kubick and Fabian Basabe.

Until next week-Life is short! You only live once, party on!

Board of Overseers what LIU had decided, and the Board of Overseers asked if they could be on the LIU committee looking into other educational options. Steinberg told them they were not welcome to join in that effort. And so after Steinberg left, the Overseers, led by Sillerman, who stayed, voted to create a committee of their own to look into options for the future of this college campus. A meeting of the Overseers is upcoming at the home of Bob Sillerman within the next few days.

In other words, things are moving along. LIU is a failure at running Southampton and has no stomach to continue on. But everyone is in agreement that this place should be a college. State University people are meeting. The Overseers are meeting. And LIU is willing to consider just about anything. Their first move, to announce their determination to put the magnificent Parrish Art Museum on the campus, as planned, put their cards on the table.

Exciting times are ahead. Intelligent people are at work to help LIU extricate itself from this mess, yet allow a new college to be born. It all could be done in a year, if everyone works harmoniously. Worst case would be that there might be a year when just the Marine Science program (250 students) continues on, when just the LIU graduate program (130 students) continues on, when the All for the Sea Rock Concert and the Writer's Conference continue on, and the rest is just a lot of construction, some underway, some planned, involving the new library (already started), the new Parrish museum, the renovation of the dorms and a new quadrangle, but no undergraduates. Yet.

Worst, worst case? Maybe an abandoned college campus for a few years, followed by who knows? But I doubt it.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

LIU has three campuses, Brooklyn (8,000 students), C. W. Post at Brookville (14,000 students) and Southampton College (1,100 students.) Southampton College has lost approximately $7 million a year in recent years. Next year the losses were predicted to be $10 or $12 million. Losses at Brooklyn and C. W. Post every year have been under a million.

LIU founded Southampton College in 1963. LIU Brooklyn was founded in 1926. LIU C. W. Post was founded in 1954. Southampton has never made money. It has never developed a serious endowment. (Current endowment is about $1 million.) Alumni giving has been about nil for a college of this size. Fundraising among wealthy summer residents has been about nil. They'd rather give to their own alumni. Mr. Sillerman has donated between $15 and $25 million. Southampton has an eager and talented faculty, but all decisions about Southampton College are made from afar, from headquarters in Brooklyn.

Programs in the sciences and arts and letters at Southampton have been weak. The Marine Science Program is world famous. The Writer's Conference is dazzling. The All for the Sea Concerts make $1 million and are terrific.

"Angel Skin" - Queen Sheet Set $3,180 and Checks Queen Blanket - $970

Pratesi, a family company, has always dressed the beds of the world's rich and famous. Take the best raw materials, add a unique individual design that is both classic and contemporary pay close attention to the details of the workmanship, and make by hand individually as opposed to mass produced. Pratesi linens are manufactured in Italy, from the top 2% of southern Egyptian cotton and are 65% polyester, 35% cotton. Only the inner most threads of the cotton ball are used, which provide for greater durability and a higher absorbency "Angel Skin" is the name given to Pratesi cotton, as it is soft, presumably like the skin of an angel! Duvet cover, shams and pillows are also available both Queen and King sizes.

Singing The Blues

Another Great Year For The Annual Riverhead Blues Festival

By Joanne Hodes

Although it seemed like the Grinch tried to stop the Sixth Annual Riverhead Blues Festival from happening, it happened anyway. And what a spectacular event it was.

It all began last Friday night at five o'clock and continued through Sunday. And as the traffic through downtown Riverhead began to build, so did the excitement. The village was transformed from a quite hamlet to Party Town USA. Over 100 performers came to strut their stuff on four stages, all of which housed different sounds of the Blues. Then on Sunday, quite apropos, the sweet sound of Gospel music filled the air.

With so many great performers to see it was difficult to choose. But in the end it didn't really matter because there were no disappointments. My first stop along with hundreds of others was at the Riverfront Stage to see T-Bone and the Hatchetmen. They performed some of their original music along with some Blues favorites. Their rendition of Baby Won't Ya Please Come Home and Chain of Fools started the crowd singing and dancing and yelling for more.

Next up was Little Curtis with the Jim Moran Band featuring Hooch and special guest the fabulous Gwen Presley. Gwen started the set with You Are Mine, and the beauty of her voice sent chills down the spine. A duet followed with Gwen and Little Curtis singing Something is Wrong. When the band played Little Red Rooster and Mustang Sally, the crowd got downright wild.

The Vail Leavitt Music Hall was recently renovated and has a great acoustic sound. The theater is on the second floor and although the music was hot, the building is cool and air conditioned. Hooch and the Bluesicians were performing, with Hooch on the harmonica, guitar and doing vocals for the band. They played many songs, including Rockin Robin, Down the Road I Go, Told It Like It Was, and Fly, with the audience hootin' and hollerin'. But it wasn't over. Little Curtis was in the audience and joined the band on stage to sing My My Whoa Whoa I Love Ya So before a dedication to Vicki, with If I Go. The audience was on its feet and didn't want the band to stop, but Annie Raines and Paul Rishell came on next and performed to a packed house.

Gospel singer Alexis Suter

Back to the Riverfront Stage to see The Hackensackmen and the Trenton Horns. A ten-man band that not only filled the stage but filled the air with great music as well. When they high kicked to Get on Up the audience went wild. Over at the Riffa Theater Andy Aledort and The Groove Kings were filling seats and air too.

By nine-thirty the crowds began finding their spots by the Riverfront Stage to hear the sweet music of Terraplaine Blues, who were playing original music along with the sounds of the great Etta James and Ruth Brown, and soon thousands of people of all ages were waiting to hear the legendary Sam "the bluzman" Taylor. Joining Sam on stage were Big Al on saxophone, White Gary on bass, Gary Sellers on guitar, Mario Staiano on drums, and Danny Keogh on keyboards. Sam did not disappoint the waiting crowd. The music was tight, and Sam's stage persona was, as always, dynamic. The band played My Imagination, Only the Blues to Me, Damn Your Eyes, and Tell By The Way You Move, and when they played Drinkin' Straight Tequila, Sam had the whole crowd singing with him. I'm sure we could be heard singing out in the Hamptons. When Sam sang Someone To Hold, it brought tears to my eyes.

So many bands, so much to say, not enough room. On Saturday hundreds of people returned early to Riverhead for day two of the Festival. Stand out performances by Cadillac Moon, Joe Vicino and the Smokedaddys, Lex Grey and the Urban Pioneers

Come and watch a chef demonstrate a favorite recipe paired with Palmer Vineyards' best wines. Admission: $8, includes glass of wine and food tasting. Call 722-WINE.

Wine, Women and Health

According to the owners of Comtesse Therese, the traditional image of a wine drinker is that of a man, but that is changing. Women are now bigger consumers of wine than men, and make more of the buying decisions. Founding partner Theresa Dillworth says, "Women traditionally did most of the cooking, and are very aware of food. Wine is like food, a part of a meal. Our goal, in our winemaking style, is to make delicious wines that go well with food. Also, women are very aware of health issues. I personally drink a little wine almost every day, both because it tastes good and for the anti-oxidant effect. It has been shown to reduce heart disease, cholesterol, high blood pressure, certain types of cancer, Alzheimer's, and other diseases."

I'll certainly drink to that. And you should, too. Cheers.

6TH ANNUAL RIVERHEAD BLUES FESTIVAL

Thousands of fans turned out to rock the Peconic Riverfront during the now legendary annual three-day festival on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 16-18. Blues greats like Sam "The Bluzman" Taylor, T-Bone and the Hatchetmen and Kerry Kearney were joined by bands Cadillac Moon, Lex Grey and the Urban Pioneers and Phil Varca and the Slamjammers. On stage, Phil's young son brought down the house and a huge echo from the crowd when he screamed out "Rock and Roll." Jimi would have been proud.

An Interview: Blues Hall Of Fame's Sam "The Bluzman" Taylor

Dan's North Fork: Where were you born and raised?

Sam: I was born in Mobile, Alabama, on October 25, 1934. I moved to Williamsburg, Brooklyn, when I was 11 years old, and joined the US Air Force at 19. I was stationed in Westhampton, at what is now Gabreski Airport.

How long have you been performing?

I first performed right here in Riverhead, at the Blue Bird Inn on Flanders Road, 50 years ago this close to death. She prayed to God and asked Him to spare her life so that she could take care of her children. God spared her, and from that time on she sang only Gospel music and devoted her life to God and her children.

B.B.King's guitar is named Lucille. Do you have a name for your guitar?

My guitar's name is Samantha.

What instruments do you play?

I play the guitar, bass and keyboards. My favorite is the guitar.

We all know that Blues is a feeling, you can't just sing the Blues you have to feel them. At what age did you feel the blues?

I felt the Blues at age four during my mother's sickness and recovery.

What types of music do you like to listen to?

Of course the Blues, but I also like Gospel, Country, Jazz. All types of music.

When were you inducted into the Blues Hall of Fame?

In 1995. I also received the Lifetime Achievement Award from the Boston Blues Society in 2003 and from the Long Island Blues Society in 2004.

What is your favorite song to perform?

My favorite song to perform is Someone to Hold.

October.

Who are some of the people you have performed with?

The Drifters, Joey Dee and the Starlighters, The Rascals, Timi Yuro, Maxine Brown, Tracy Nelson, Kerry Kearney, Little Curtis and others.

Who and what has influenced your music?

B.B. King - from the moment I heard him I wanted to do that, too. My mother, Mary Lee, she was a Blues singer. I come from a family of nine children, and when I was four my mother got sick and was

Kerry Kearney

(sexy Lexie wooed the audience with her stage persona), Phil Varca and the Slammjammers. Phil jumped around from platform to platform, throwing his guitar in the air, entertaining not only the crowd but his young son as well, whom he brought on stage and let scream out "Rock and Roll" to the thousands in Riverhead, who in return yelled it back. Other standouts included Blue River, Dan Stevens, Mel Melton and the Wicked Mojos, the combo team of Kerry Kearney and Lex Grey, David Jacobs-Strain, and Killer Joe and the Lido Soul Revue. The night ended with a fireworks display.

One last question before you go on stage. How do you find the inspiration for your music?

I put my life to music. Being able to sing the Blues and to entertain people while I do it is a gift. It makes me feel good and you can't put a dollar sign on that. I've had 2 open heart surgeries, a quadruple and a triple bypass, and I take insulin shots twice a day. But I feel that I am a blessed man. God is good to me. He gave me the gift of the Blues.

Sam Taylor can be heard on WUSB 90.1 every Friday morning 9 a.m.-11a.m. on a show called "Blues with a Feeling."

Sunday started with Gospel music on both the Riverfront and West Stages. The voices of these Gospel singers were incredible. Alexis Suter brought down the Vail Leavitt Music Hall with her music. Her original tunes Ride, Ride, and Sis' Mary rocked the house and when she sang Teacher Man there wasn't a dry eye in the room. Remember the name Alexis Suter because, with her talent and voice she is on her way to being a big star, though she is a very humble artist who thanked all who helped her get started.

Nathan and the Zydeco Cha Chas performed Zydeco Gotta Go, Your Mama Don't Cook, Rockin My Pillow, Somebody Get Up and many other tunes.

However, Kerry Kearney Band had just begun to sing when the skies opened up and buckets of rain fell from the sky. The Riverhead Blues Festival took their show to Club 91, a local establishment that was gracious enough to let them perform there. The final act of Magic Slim and the Teardrops performed to a packed house.

I was able to speak with Little Curtis, who not only is a wonderful and talented Blues singer, but is also a local businessman in Riverhead: he owns and operates B & C Cosmetics and Beauty Supplies. He said, "This is the time when Riverhead should stand up and receive a standing ovation, from the supervisor to the council people to the highway department, the grounds people to the clean-up crew, and everybody who worked together to make this a wonderful and successful event..." Double stand up for Bob Damion (event organizer) who did a wonderful job to complete the work of his late friend, Vicki Staciwo, who started the festival."

It was a wonderful weekend. Kudos to all involved for putting together such a spectacular free event.

Dan's North Fork Edition

North Fork ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

SHAPIRO AND RUBIN AT GALERIE NOUVELLE

A trip to the North Fork can serve many purposes, but a favorite one is certainly to see art. Of course, there are different kinds of art here: compositions deriving from the natural landscape; designs originating from roadside produce stands and markets; the architectural details stemming from the vineyards.

North Fork art gallery venues have diversity, too, including private homes, warehouses and now Southold's Galerie Nouvelle (GN). This variety is genuine and not simply applicable to alternate spaces; it's perfectly understandable why the GN holds court in a structure looking like a cross between a business space and a charming residence.

Considering the area's wide open spaces and Greenport's large downtown (unlike the few blocks comprising most Hampton hamlets), it doesn't seem unusual that GN sits by itself on the road, outside Southold's tiny commercial district.

GN's current show features two contrasting artists, subject-wise. Yet both Barry Shapiro and Melissa Bowen Rubin have a similar sense of place. For Mr. Shapiro that place is his home: the North Fork. We like his lack of focus, that is his Locality is also a salient aspect of work by Ms. Rubin, but she doesn't necessarily deal with familiar turf. Rather, her subject matter is Mexico, but just as indigenous and articulate as Mr. Shapiro's. Architectural details are Ms. Rubin's talking points, with doorways and windows casting a particular spell on viewers.

So is her use of bright colors, common to the area. We especially like "Oaxaca Doorway," featuring a woman with a basket on her head. There's a narrative quality here that enhances the interest; we want to know more about the people in the painting.

Ms. Rubin also focus on details, although we don't know if her still lifes derive from the foreign environment. Her curious combinations evoke the senses: red onions and ginger; raddiccio, onions and beets.

They all look good enough to eat.

The show is currently on view at GN ( in the Bohn Building, 50300 Main St., Southold ). Marion Wolberg Weiss contributes her Art Commentary column to Dan's Papers' Arts & Entertainment section every week.

capturing a variety of landscapes during diverse seasons. There's winter at Richmond Creek, for example, and summer beach scenes.

Even so, Mr. Shapiro does focus on many salient aspects of his landscapes, and they are probably his most arresting pieces: fields of dandelions and black-eyed Susans. There's a sense of "being there" which continues to be a welcomed aspect of painting local scenes.

Big Events Of The Week

Oil by artist Max Moran

since the sold-out hit at Martha Clara Vineyards two years ago, which will open with a reception on Saturday, July 24, from 5-8 p.m., will be held at Cecily's newly renovated Love Lane Gallery in Mattituck. Call 298-8610.

NEW PAINTINGS BY MAX MORAN AT CECILY'S LOVE LANE Saturday, July 24

One of the North Fork's pre-eminent artists, Max Moran has achieved well-deserved recognition for his outstanding talent in oils. His paintings of rural North Fork landscapes and surreal New York City rainscapes are in many private collections on both eastern Long Island and Manhattan.

His first public one-man show

SECOND ANNIVERSARY SHOW: SANDI WOESSNER AT BLUE DOOR Saturday, July 24

It seems like only yesterday that curator/owner Sandi Woessner opened her Blue Door Gallery in Flower Alley off East Main Street in downtown Riverhead. Today, the newly expanded sophisticated space is not only serene and cool in the summer heat, but offers lots of wall space to display an impressive stable of house artists, including painters Alan Bull and Chris Stavropoulos and photographers Bob Markell and Steve Berger. Join Sandi as she celebrates the gallery's two-year anniversary with a show of her own pastels and oils with an opening on Saturday, July 24, from 5-8 p.m. Music by Bruce MacDonald. Call 208-8166.

NOFO FILM FESTIVAL OPENS AT ICEHOUSE Saturday, July 24

Greenport's Icehouse Gallery and Screening Room kicks off the 2003 NoFo Film Festival with a "Short Film Extravaganza" tonight at 8 p.m. Included in the program is the Ragdoll Productions' series called "Open a Door," which includes 17 short films about children that open a window on cultures around the world. Other films include award winning shorts from the Tribeca, Hamptons and Woodstock Film

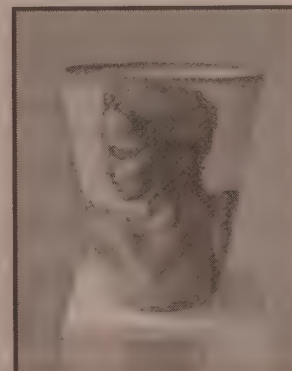

A still from the "Open a Door" independent film series

Festivals. Call Icehouse curator Hannah Gray for more info at 477-0745. Upcoming Festival events will be posted here in Dan's North Fork events section.

ANNUAL EEAC "SECRET GARDEN" FUNDRAISER Sunday, July 25

This annual fundraising event for the East End Arts Council, "secret" because you never know what treasure you'll find around each corner, is being held this year in the beautiful gardens of Landcraft Environments, owned by Bill Smith and Dennis Schrader of East Mill Lane in Mattituck, on Sunday, July 25, from 4-7 p.m. Local artists have been invited to participate by designing a flower pot to be donated to the Silent Auction or by painting the landscape onsite as an "Artist on Location." With a tropical theme, jazz by Mamba Loco, and Caribbean food and drink by Divine Cafe, this promises to be a memorable evening. Tickets are $75. Call 727-0900.

Bayview Inn & Restaurant. Culinary fireworks from a new sparkler facing Peconic Bay. The historic Bayview has undergone many identity changes since its inception as an 1860's boutique hotel. Owners Bob and Pat Patchell have restored its original spirit, with seven guestrooms and the North Fork's most exciting new dining room. Thomas Lopez creates separate specials menus, complementing his regular card of winners like spinach pasta with chunky lobster, Asian-style breast of duck, and marinated lamb chops in mint demi-glace. Scrumptious desserts and a kid's menu ensure everyone goes home (or upstairs) happy. South Jamesport Ave. and Front Street, South Jamesport. 722-2659. Entrees, $18-$26. (Trueman-Honey, 8/1/03). [Di,S,Sh]

The Clubhouse at Indian Island. Along the pretty Peconic River at Indian Island Golf Course, this restaurant offers quality cooking at realistic prices convenient to diners from both forks. New proprietor Russ Moran transformed a drab dining room to one of warmth and comfort with soft lighting and smartly laid tables. His eclectic menu features the gently pan-fried oysters and clams on the half shell, which you'd swear were just plucked from the bay. French onion soup is deep in flavor. L.I. duck in a pepper cherry sauce and calves liver with bacon & onions were tasty and will leave no one hungry. Riverside Drive & Route 105, Riverhead. 727-0788. Entrees, $11.95-$16.95. (Bradbrook, 4/16/04.)

Cooperage Inn. With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm, 1/10/03). [Br,D]

Desmond's Pub & Restaurant at the Inn at East Wind. The North Fork's new destination hotel hosts an elegant and restful dining room serving excellent a la carte dishes and classic pub fare. Executive chef Richard Laurelli's daily specials are consistent standouts, as evidenced by his chilled vegetable soup with lobster meat, as well as the Andalusia-style beef and chicken tapas. Pub favorites like crisply battered cod and chips hit the mark and familiar entrees like grilled lamb chops are perfectly prepared. The wine list is sensibly priced, though short on local vintages. Blueberry creme brulee was an inventive and winning update on a classic dessert. Entrees, $16-$26. 5720 Rt. 25A, Wading River. 929-3500. (Bradbrook, 8/29/03). [Pu].

Do Little's. Very welcoming and unpretentious. An excellent menu for diners interested in fresh, smartly prepared dishes that are not calorically trumped up. Thai mussels in ginger/lemongrass broth hit the mark. Excellent pasta dishes, headlined by justifiably famous Seafood Pasta in white wine sauce, filled with mussels, clams and shrimp over linguine with fresh tomatoes and spinach. Stuffed ravioli with sun-dried tomatoes and mozzarella is beautifully done. Sensibly priced wine list, with a knowing nod to local vintages. Entrees, $12.95-$19.95. Rt. 25, Mattituck Plaza, Mattituck. 298-4000. (Bradbrook, 7/28/01). [G]

Le de Beaute. In a beautiful old house with courtyard tables, the spirit of Provence is alive in Greenport with highly authentic French cuisine. Its treatment of classics like escargots, French onion soup, and frogs' legs runs the gamut from superb to extraordinary. Rack of lamb, served with rosemary sauce reduction, is masterly. Desserts are tasty and the crepe options are best expressed in exponential notation. Service is deliberate but attentive. Entrees $24-35. 314 Main Street, Greenport. (Bradbrook, 7/12/02). [C,H,J]

La Cuvée Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartar and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakable Asian influence. But executive chef / owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03). [B,W]

La Plage. A glowing beacon along the Sound coast for sophisticated diners. The stellar reputation of chef / proprietor Wayne Wadington derives from cutting-edge combinations of difficult-to-secure ingredients. His creations fly off the menu as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance try the lightly seared scallops with blue crab mille feuille in a kaffir lime / sweet pea sauce or yellow fin tuna paired with chorizo sausage and butternut squash. Desserts range from decadent (chocolate cake with an espresso mousse) to delicate (Tahitian vanilla crème brulee). All are mind boggling. Top wine list, too. Entrees $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 2/04). [Ap,Ch]

RESTAURANT AT THE WOODS

From the NY Times, Mrs. JoAnne Starkey says:

"Mr. Guy Peuch's crab cakes are legendary, perhaps the best on Long Island."

From Newsday, Mr. Peter Gianotti says:

"It's easily the most impressive restaurant to open in Riverhead since potatoes began giving way to grapes! Excellent main course; pork chop finishes with nubbins of garlic and sage. Also first rate, the Niman Ranch dry-rubbed rib steak. Top desserts: lemon tart, tart tatin and chocolate-hazelnut puck."

From Dan's Papers, Mr. Roy Bradbrook says:

"Probably the best lobster bisque we have ever tasted; pate with pistachio and truffles was superb, vibrant duck a l'orange with some incredible wild rice, impressive desserts. Guy Feuch is among the very top tier chefs in this region."

North Fork Critics' Choice 2003 (continued from previous page)

Modern Snack Bar. Home-cooked meals away from home await you at this charming family-run restaurant operating since 1950. Wittmeier brothers' time-honored menu contains dishes too good to go out of style. Delectable sauerbraten is perfectly tender and the stuffed cabbage very good. Duck breast salad, recently introduced, is another winner. Crab cakes and lobster salad are real treats, but the big surprise is the world-class shrimp and crabmeat quiche. Home-baked desserts are splendid and their take-out pie business is brisk. Wines are mostly limited to local vintages. Reservations not needed, but day or night, it's always a crowded house. Entrees, $9-$17. Rt. 25 Aquebogue. 722-3655. (Bradbrook, 10/4/02). [T]

Red Door. A quintessentially North Fork restaurant: Manhattan-caliber cuisine paired with an ambience of low-key charm. The Mediterranean-influenced American regional menu always offers a panoply of pastas as well as meat and fish dishes. Perhaps their winningest recipe occurred by accident. Ask genial chef/owner Stephen Mazzella for the story behind his remarkable porterhouse pork chop with honey, capers and cayenne. A true instance of luck being the residue of design! Dessert lovers have their vocabulary stretched by such wonders as raspberry crème brûlée and Godiva chocolate cake with Tahitian vanilla bean ice cream. Ample wine list. Entrees - $16-$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Trueman-Honey, 12/03). [D]

Scrimshaw. Chef/co-owner Rosa Ross, whose culinary credentials are carved in many a menu from Hong Kong to Italy to Manhattan, brings her latest invention to Greenport. Nestled at the end of Preston's Dock, there are dazzling views of Shelter Island. The slightly crammed dining room is made intimate and warm by sophisticated lighting and subdued music. The menu is full of interesting tastes, starting with excellent duck confit-stuffed spring rolls and hearty fish chowder. Especially good among the eclectic entrees are tamarind lamb shanks with lemon risotto and the supremely comforting seafood in a sweet, tangy kaffir lime coconut broth. Interesting wine list. Preston's Dock (at end of Main Street), Greenport. 477-8882. (Simm, 06/04).

The Shady Lady Restaurant. The Zorn family's vision of stately elegance comes to the North Fork in this grandly unique dining room. Two rooms actually, with dinner jackets de rigueur in the Scarlet Room and a more casual ambience pervading the lodge-like Pine Room. The menu keeps apace with the opulence of the surroundings. Chef Ross Essner's cosmopolitan cooking style is globally savvy, but local-ingredient particular. Especially breathtaking is the lobster risotto with diver scallop and asparagus. A superb cheese plate complements the dessert choices and the wines are as excellently-chosen as they are reasonably-priced. 305 North Road, Greenport. 477-4500. Entrees, $28-$38. (Bradbrook, 7/18/03). [A,Cu,Ser,Spe,W]

Stonewall's. Haute cuisine in a tranquil setting, at the Woods Course at Cherry Creek in Riverhead. Step into the warm and inviting dining room, however, and your thoughts will happily shift from golf course to main course. Many superb entrees, including the delicate halibut in a mustard-nut crust, are worth savoring long after the meal has concluded. Duck à l'orange on a bed of wild rice is another standout as is the deeply flavorful lobster bisque. Rigatoni with roasted tomatoes, mozzarella, capers and olives is exquisitely al dente. Fine wines and creatively fruity desserts complete a dining experience par excellence. Entrees $15-$27. 967 Reeves Ave., Riverhead. 506-0777. (Bradbrook, 9/12/03). [Lu,N]

chilled but not icy; baby spinach salad with gorgonzola; black Angus porterhouse. Manicotti in a fresh, simple tomato sauce is among the many pleasing pasta dishes. Lobster Meat over angel hair pasta, a frequent special, is an exciting dish of imaginative complexity and one of the North Fork's perennial favorites. Cold seafood bruschetta is another special to watch for. Entrees $16-$34. Wickham Avenue at Matt-A-Mar Marina, Mattituck. 298-5851. (Bradbrook, 8/16/02). [L,O]

Tuscan House. Your table is yours for the evening at this elegant, upscale Italian. Authentic, classical dishes bear the deft touch of chef William Oster. His fish is exceptionally fresh and his osso bucco masterly. But his virtuosity lies in the care with which he pairs his 16 pastas and his sublime sauces. The results range from delicate to intense. Pappardelle with a puree of beans dressed with soppressata, fresh chilies, garlic and parmigiano reggiano is typically adventurous and winning. The dessert tray is filled with excellent choices. Well-chosen wines, emphasis on regional Italians. 673 Osborn Ave., Riverhead. 727-2330. (Bradbrook, 9/7/01). [C,I,P]

Tweed's. Owner Ed Tuccio parlayed his interests in history, Americana and the bison to create this unique eatery. The décor puts one in mind of an expensive turn-of-the-century men's club, but with a romantic twist. Notable appetizers include Oysters Portland, enveloped in sautéed leeks and crisp bacon, and the Bistro Salad, redolent of blue cheese and roasted beets. Aside from Tweed's excellent specialty of the house, succulent farm-raised bison, also recommended are the Sashimi Sesame Tuna, carb-free vegetable lasagna, and Duck Two Ways. Don't skip dessert: the pastry chef is a graduate of the Cordon Bleu in London.

Entrees $19-26. 17 E. Main St., Riverhead. 208-3151. (Trueman-Honey, 7/04/03). [St].

BRIDGEHAMPTON POLO OPENER

The anticipation was as great as to who would fill the VIP tent as who would win the first match at Bridgehampton Polo. The reason: a new group is in charge of the check-in desk - party magnets Matt Heien of BNC, Jason Straus, Noah Tepperberg, and Tony Berger. We saw lots of fresh new faces from the Under 30 "A" list. The guest of honor was hot actress and former Dark Angel, Jessica Alba. Oscar nominee Sylvia Myles said "they invite me so people know you can still be old and on the scene."

PARRISH MIDSUMMER GALA

Last Saturday night guests left their color at home and came dressed in black and white for the Midsummer Gala to benefit the Parrish Art Museum in Southampton. Honorary Co-Chairs for the event were Debbie Bancroft, Katharina Otto-Bernstein and Beth Rudin deWoody and Event Co-chairs were Pamela Gross, Leila Heller and Sloan Barnett. The Southampton social calendar for this day was starred as a must-attend as it brought out all the familiar faces and bold face names of Southampton. Cocktails were followed by a dinner-dance, then the younger generation joined and got down for some serious boogieing.

BELLA CASA

Larry and Maria Baum hosted a cocktail reception last Friday evening at their new store, Bella Casa Fine Italian Furnishings in Sag Harbor. The evening was a success where well-known guests and business owners sipped wine poured by Castello di Borghese Vineyards, cheese platters from Cavanola's Gourmet and hors d'oeuvres homemade by Maria herself!

EAST END OPEN

The cry was "keep your eye on the ball!" as the East End Open transitioned from a tennis event to tennis + golf tourneys to benefit East End Hospice. The Golf Outing took place at Rock Hill Country Club while the tennis tourney was held at Westhampton Tennis and Sport. I played in the tennis portion and saw old friends from many years as a member of the club and supporter of the Open. Awards and trophies were handed out at Rock Hill. Chairs of the event were Lorrie Gordon, Pat O'Keefe and Diana Oliver Steinberg. Hospice provides care for the terminally ill and runs Camp Good Grief, a bereavement camp. EEO has the living spirit of Sue Katz who will always be remembered and missed. The hands on support of the women who have made EEO such a success is admirable — maybe next year it will be Golf, Tennis, Cycling, Aerobics, Volleyball and who knows what else these dedicated women can do!

CAROL M. BALDWIN GOLF OUTING

Amagansett's Alec Baldwin joined family and friends at The 2004 Carol M. Baldwin Breast Cancer Research Fund's Annual Celebrity Golf Outing at the Nissequogue Golf Club last week for golf, fun, contests, and lunch by Applebee's. Later, Grey Goose Vodka poured martinis at the cocktail reception. The organization supports both new and established researchers at University Hospital and Medical Center at the SUNY Stony Brook, and other outstanding academic institutions, investigating the causes, prevention and treatment of breast cancer. Guests were fitted for complimentary sunglasses, courtesy of Clearvision Optica.

ELTON JOHN BENEFIT

Elton John performed a concert to benefit the Juilliard School and The Royal Academy of Music at Radio City Music Hall. This benefit performance was Elton's opening night of a five-concert series and was followed by a Gala Dinner at The Rainbow Room in NYC. Elton and his band performed live with a full symphony orchestra conducted by James Newton Howard. Funds raised from this event will be used to promote joint artists programs and further exchanges between Juilliard and The Royal Academy.

STELLA ADLER CELEBRATION

Barbara and John (Bunky) Hearst once again graciously welcomed guests to their hilltop estate for a very special evening celebrating the committees and sponsors of the Stella Adler Studio of Acting Gala, Stella by Starlight. Adler alum Roy Scheider and his beautiful wife, Brenda Siemer, co-hosted the evening, with performances by students of the acclaimed studio. The announcement of the 2004 Stella Adler Studio of Acting Awards were given by Ellen Adler and Tom Oppenheim, daughter and grandson of the legendary Stella Adler, to Tony Kushner, Arthur Miller, and the late Marlon Brando. Ellen Adler shared some of her early memories of the young Marlon, who remained her close friend until his death last week. The fall gala will take place on November 8 at The Pierre Hotel. 212-838-2660 ext.22

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

Heroes and anti-heroes are the stuff movies are stuffed with. Trouble is, like pillows, some heroes are stuffed with tough, stiffening agents and others with chicken feathers. Some anti-heroes contain a soft and gentle downer of inner resilience while others are full of polyester kapok chopped coarsely into cubes that wind up as a pain in the neck.

The redoubtable hero of a romantic legend, King Arthur, as given shape by the very fine British actor Clive Owen (and produced by Jerry Bruckheimer, the Circus Maximus of Hollywood), Arthur becomes tough and very stiff but still cuddly enough to be a nice place for Guinevere's head. Keira Knightley's Guinevere has changed, too. When it comes time to turn in with the king, there's little to remove – less than Sheena, Queen of the Jungle. That is, after she retires her bow and arrows. The world of Arthur's Round Table, according to Bruckheimer, has been squared off. Its sharp corners are what's purported to be the "true story." Shining Camelot has been converted to a musky camel lot. This version is truly "once and future" since it is a spatter of Braveheart, Gladiator, Seven Samurai and Tears of The Sun, the Bruce Willis, sweaty, humid, contest also directed by this movie's general, Antoine Fuqua. Battles in King Arthur are evenly placed through the film and they really know how to hurt a guy. Also, the weather is awful. You got your rain, fog, sleet, lots of ice and that darned California style smog – hard to tell who's losing whose head in the fray. A very mixed international cast fights bravely, even as well-known characters are barely recognizable. Gosh darn it – Merlin isn't a magician! But it figures, there ain't no magic, at all, in the new King Arthur.

The usually rest assured, likeable anti-hero performer Will Ferrell (See Elf) is now in a restless, theatrical head rest of a movie as a coarse, polyester, uncomfortable Anchorman, the retrograde 1970s newsman in the Playboy age of smoking, drinking and pinching bunny bottoms – all in fun, of course, but is it? Ferrell's TV newsreader, Ron Burgundy, in a comedy meant to be a satire (see his weighty hairdo and heavier near-Stalin moustache) is less of an indictment of the era of clueless chauvinism than it is of bad hair, bad clothes and dumbness. As for the once and future past – local television newsmen have been good for a laugh since the classic Ted Baxter fumbled his way through the "Mary Tyler Moore" show. San Diego is the relaxed location for Anchorman's news team of overly jocular banter and jock strap leering at women. There was a true event I remember of a New York City weatherman who came on after the report of a rape. He quipped, "She should have lain back and enjoyed herself." He was gone. A year or two earlier no one might have noticed. I expected some pointed relevance to Ferrell's parody as it begins with the narration, "This was an age when only men were allowed to read the news." Will's Ron is a goofball who will read anything on the teleprompter and expect his audience to believe it. Like Ron, as script written by Mr. Ferrell, he expects us to have faith that no matter how much sleazy sexism he exhibits, we believe that he's reinforcing feminist advances. Funny, I mean odd, not really funny. That ABC-TV weatherman thought he was being hilariously funny.

Ha Ha! (That's a very weak Ha Ha).

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmys and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

LIFETIME ACHIEVEMENT HONOREES AT GUILD HALL

One of the best aspects of Guild Hall's current show, besides the obvious, is the chance to see unfamiliar works by its lifetime achievement awardees. Or at the very least, pieces which have not been exhibited for several years since their initial creation. Thus, selections were not necessarily based on the dates when the works were made: an important decision that enhances the show.

Take this critic's personal favorite by Eric Fischl, a painting created after he won his award in 1994. Its title, "The Beginning of the End," precisely captures Mr. Fischl's signature theme: a frozen moment in a time continuum that is both abstract and concrete. The piece contains the artist's stylistic signature as well: fragmentation of the body along with wholeness. Figures usually never directly face each other in Mr. Fischl's paintings, but the fact that they do in this work is crucial to its complexity. Its narrative dimension also evokes Mr. Fischl's cinematic sensibility.

Larry Rivers' family portrait is similarly filmic, its various images suggesting a montage. It's also sexual in a literal way without implying eroticism like Mr. Fischl's work. It is a painting that will be new to a lot of viewers, one which was featured in a documentary recently shown at Guild Hall. In the movie, Mr. Rivers' daughters talk about the piece with insight and pathos, the work assuming more significance when considered in the film's context.

While Julian Schnabel's 2001 "Girl With No Eyes" was painted three years after he received his award, it may still seem unfamiliar even with its characteristic slash of paint rendered across the woman's face. What's intriguing is the concrete, rather than abstract, imagery.

April Gornik's landscape is

also not particularly what one would expect: her familiar pieces are usually cloud and skyscapes. But there's still the idea of a story unfolding, the presence of someone or something standing "off-screen," observing the scene.

Art by William King and Ross Bleckner, however, evoke comforting familiarity. There's Mr. King's quartet of male figures, "Together Again," reinforcing the hilarity of human behavior. And Mr. Bleckner's impressionistic Monet-like work which signifies the AIDS epidemic. This is a particularly moving piece, highlighting the artist's dynamic juxtaposition of beauty and disease.

The current exhibit at East Hampton's Guild Hall is on view until August 1.

HONORING THE ARTIST: LORRAINE SHEMESH

We all know that looks can be deceiving. We also know that what you see is what you get. Two contradictory statements, both true. And more salient, both applicable to this week's cover painting by Lorraine Shemesh.

Considering the latter statement first: we see a swimmer in the water, a recognizable image to be sure, even if the figure is a bit contorted. But wait. Is that all there is to it? The answer is a resounding "No."

The piece's familiarity is decidedly false when applying the former statement concerning deception. First, while water is a purifying agent, we're not quite so sure in this case; there's something scary about its demeanor. Secondly, the figure's position and nature suggest either a living or perhaps a dead body. And thirdly, what are we to make of the abstract designs on the body itself? It evokes all kinds of references, but we're not exactly sure which ones.

Ms. Shemesh clears up the mystery involving the image's meaning when she talks about her love of art forms as diverse as ceramics, weaving and dance. "This series evolved from my collaboration with dancers, my drawing them in their studio, the transporting of the movement when they got into water.

Over the years, I have also worked with clay and was fascinated by the fact that it has a 'memory,' that the dent returns in the process."

Moreover, we can now easily see how Ms. Shemesh's penchant for African textiles and woven baskets has also informed her series, finding a similarity between the abstract compositions on the swimmer's body and woven fabric, for example.

But there is more to the cover's work besides its multiple aesthetic sources. In many ways, the piece pinpoints Ms. Shemesh's essential philosophy of life and work. "My work is about transformation and the process which creates such a condition. About the opposing dynamics between weight and weightlessness, predictability and unpredictability, stillness and non-stillness."

The last contradiction holds special meaning for Ms. Shemesh. Knowing the natural world is the clue, but knowing it through observation and silence. "We learn to read at the age of five," she says with fervor, "but we don't learn to see. Kids have trouble with the kind of language that's needed to know the silent world. If we learn that silent language, we can own and find our own power. It's about finding our own voice."

We couldn't agree more. And especially the way Ms. Shemesh uses the idea of a "voice" to discover silence.

This silent world is not without its pitfalls, however. According to the artist, it can make us aware that the universe brings change and flux as well as chaos and danger. But that doesn't stop Ms. Shemesh from flooding herself with the whole ball of wax: change, silence, danger, and especially New York where visual stimulation inspires her.

"I love being bombarded by the city's color, sound, exaggeration. I can't imagine living anywhere else, even though I've resided in a lot of places like Providence (where she taught at the Rhode Island School of Design), Boston (where she received her BFA from Boston University), Florence, and Rome.

There's so much to absorb from Ms. Shemesh's work that we are a bit perplexed as to what statement best defines her philosophy. But we finally settle on her own words: "I don't know how my paintings will turn out when I'm creating them. It's like a journey. You can't control the outcome. It's like driving a chariot pulled by wild horses."

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Shemesh's works can be seen at New York's Allan Stone Gallery (113 East 90th Street).

Location, Location, Location (Of Your Artwork)

When Tom and Janice Herlihy purchased their house at Shinnecock Hill, they were concerned about the appropriate selection of artwork best suited for their Hamptons home. Because of the proximity of their home to the water, they were uncertain as to whether their collection of photography, prints and paintings could withstand the elements. They also wanted to know how best to care for their artwork. Additionally, they had questions regarding insurance and restoration. I provided the following advice to address their concerns:

All works of art are sensitive to changes in temperature, so, as a rule, avoid placing any artwork in extreme or fluctuating temperatures.

Living on waterfront property may make this difficult, though not impossible. Not placing artwork in direct sunlight is an excellent preventative measure, as sunlight will fade the pigment of the paint, crack the surface of the canvas, and, escalate the aging process of paper or canvas.

To minimize these effects and promote longevity observe the following rules:

- Do not install above heating or air conditioning vents
- Place small rubber spacers on the back of the frame to increase air circulation
- Use archival cardboard backing (available from any art framer or art supply store) for artwork to buffer against climate changes and to keep out dust and dirt
- Use indirect lighting; recessed or ceiling mounted
- Do not use a lighting system that attaches to the top of a frame, as the heat over time will damage the canvas
- Use ultraviolet filtering plexiglass on artwork or, simply close window shades, blinds, and curtains during the day.

Photography is among the most fragile of media. Since photographs are comprised of various components (silver, platinum, organic dyes, pigments and a transparent substance), these materials negatively interact with high temperature and humidity, thus hastening deterioration and causing mold and mildew.

Therefore, do not display your photography in bathrooms, your finished attic or the basement. Otherwise, these aforementioned demons will wreak havoc on your photography.

Framing & Installation

If you are vaguely familiar with what a hammer looks like, the installation of a painting, print, or art photography should be simple. If not, contact the Parrish Art Museum or a local South Fork gallery, as they will be able to provide you with the names of skilled art handlers. Consider carefully before displaying artwork above a fireplace. While it may seem like the perfect location, it will expose your artwork to soot, heat, and other extremes.

However, if you can't resist doing so, glazing (an acrylic or glass sheet) will provide some degree of protection for the artwork and prevent the infiltration of dirt and dust.

The choices of matting, and/or framing of artwork should enhance your investment, not compete with it or overwhelm it. When in doubt, always opt for a natural wood frame and neutral color matting. Remember, you want your friends to notice the art, not the frame.

- To prevent any work on paper from becoming brittle and darkening with age, use acid free mat board.

- Always use professional picture hanging hooks (available at your local hardware store).

Restoration

On the off-chance that the cat decides to use your favorite piece of wooden sculpture as a scratching post, or your brother-in-law splashes red wine on the DeKooning, it's time to consult a professional art conservator: Contact the gallery or dealer where you made the purchase; they will be able to direct you to a conservator, or the artist who created the artwork may be able to repair it. If not, contact the American Institute for Conservation of Historic and Artistic Works (AIC). This organization has over thirty years of experience, and will be able to guide you to the proper conservator for your specific need.

- Do not worsen the situation by trying to repair the artwork yourself.

Insurance and Appraisal

Artwork worth $500 or more should be listed on your homeowner's policy. Standard renter's and homeowner's insurance policies allow provisions for the addition of artwork to the standard policy. As your collection grows and becomes more valuable, a separate insurance rider is required. To further protect your investment, have all items appraised. The American Society of Appraisers and The Appraisal Association of America will direct you to an appraiser if you cannot locate one on your own.

The Herlihy's, now know how to properly maintain and display their collection, and are interested in renting artwork. Of course, I have advice on that as well...

Searching For The Truth About Charles Horman

For fans of Jack Lemmon and Sissy Spacek, the 1982 movie Missing was a real landmark in showcasing their considerable talents. For fans of world-renowned filmmaker Constantine Costa-Gavras, a masterful director associated with powerful political thrillers aimed at exposing Fascist governments (Z and State of Siege), Missing was also a highlight.

For Joyce Horman, however, the movie has a more personal significance, one that has changed her life forever. Ms. Horman is the widow of Charles Horman, the real-life journalist from Missing who was assassinated following the 1973 American-supported military coup in Chile. Perhaps more importantly, it's the movie that first brought attention to the incident and suggested a U.S. government cover-up, and spoke to the American consciousness.

It's been over thirty years since her husband's brutal murder, yet Ms. Horman and her family are still seeking answers concerning culpability, still following leads, and still pushing for an investigation, especially the latest one in Chile, which may come to fruition by the end of the year.

Putting the extremely salient political issues aside for a moment, it's natural to ask about the movie and Ms. Horman's involvement in it. "The filmmakers went to the author of the book about my husband, The Execution of Charles Horman: An American Sacrifice," Ms. Horman explains. "Then they came to me and my husband's family. We were familiar with the director Costa-Gavras and respected his work. He knew Latin America and its politics; he was so informed. The only thing I had trouble with was the use of our real names in the script. I was the only one who asked that my first name be changed."

And what about Sissy Spacek's portrayal of her, name change and all? "I wasn't sure what I thought, but my mother said she was very good as me, so I knew it was true, although I'm bigger than Sissy.

About Jack Lemmon's portrayal of my father-in-law, it took me several viewings to finally understand what he was doing; he was wonderful, too."

Watching the film being made during the last week of shooting was a special experience for Ms. Horman and her family as well. "They shot the film in Mexico, and the first day we arrived, we went to a restaurant where coincidentally Jack and Sissy were eating. Ed (my father-in-law) went right up to Jack and said, 'I know you but you don't know me. I'm Ed Horman and you're playing me in Missing.' Jack leaped up from his chair and ran over to Ed and gave him a big embrace. He was so happy to meet him.

"We were all very close from then on. Everyone working on the film, including the French crew, was very protective of the project; the film was even sent to Paris for development. This was not a Hollywood production."

Such closeness has continued through the years. When the film's twentieth anniversary came around, Ms. Spacek, Costa-Gavras and Mr. Lemmon's son, Chris, came to help Ms. Horman celebrate.

We can only hope that there's another celebration in store when the truth is finally learned about Charles Horman's death.

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Joyce Horman will be giving an update on the Chilean investigation on Saturday, July 24 at the home of Jean Hoffman (16 Todd Drive, East Hampton). Peter Weiss, the noted human rights lawyer, will also discuss the international implications of the Horman case. Call 631-324-5819 for information, directions.

The Art Of Flower Arranging

When you walk into a room that contains a flower arrangement, you are transformed. You immediately feel better. This is because flower arranging is a vibrant, three-dimensional art form reflecting humanity's progress. Why, for example, do we always bring flowers when we visit someone who is not feeling well? According to The Complete Guide to Flower and Foliage Arrangement, prior to any reliable medical treatment, people believed that the fragrance emitted from flowers not only made the air smell sweet, but it eliminated airborne germs. In this respect, flowers influence our mood and sharpen our senses, which brings our awareness to a greater ideal.

No other country's evolution, however, has been more affected by flower arranging than Japan. It is called Ikebana and has tremendously influenced the Japanese way of life.

Ikebana reflects the idea of timelessness and changing seasons within life's natural cycle of birth, life, death and rebirth. Nature is asymmetrical and this is incorporated with the design. Underlying the style used to create the flower arrangement are the actual elements used, which may include cut branches, vines, leaves, grasses, seeds and flowers. The use of these materials takes into account not only the style of the arrangement but the size, shape, texture, volume, color of container, place and occasion of where it is to be exhibited.

When creating your flower arrangements, you should follow the natural order of things. The highest points within nature should be at the top of the design and things closer to the earth at the bottom.

Thus, tree branches would be above flowers and mountain plants above field flowers.

Although the religious aspects of Ikebana have been lost since its origins from its predecessor of 6th century Buddhism, it still maintains a discipline of creating a sense of peacefulness and balance.

A major shift in Ikebana came in the 15th century, when the art form opened itself up to the average person. Homes contained an alcove known as takonomo. This was a sacred niche within the home where all artistic objects and flowers were placed. To show respect to any visitors, flowers of the season would be used and placed in the takonomo for the guests' enjoyment. To honor the changing seasons, bare branches would be implemented in late fall and winter and to signify the March winds of early spring, a sweeping, curved branch would be employed.

During the 15th century, the classical style known as Rikka was prominent. The main feature of this particular design is based on asymmetry, symbolism and space structure. Its main goal would be to create a microcosm. This was achieved by the use of seven branches, each representing an aspect of nature. The technique incorporated a balance of both the yang (positive) energy of the sun and the yin (negative) energy of the earth. An example of creating a small universe reflecting a nature scene would draw the eye in a descending direction starting at the top of a peak, down a hill upon which a waterfall would cascade. The water, upon reaching the town, would then become the gathering place for the townspeople. The valley to the rear of the mountain would be the final image.

The 16th century is when the Nageire style (to throw in) came into existence. This was known as the tall vase style. The structure was composed around three parts of one single dominant branch and two adjunct branches. Nageire is associated with tea ceremonies (chabana), flowers composed on one or two branches or flowers in a small canister.

The final style, Morabana, which means to pile up, came in the 1890s when Japan began to incorporate western influences into their compositions. This was referred to as "shallow vase style." The arrangement is placed in a low, wide vase and gives the arrangement a three-dimensional effect.

Ikebana has such universal appeal because it has limitless possibilities, unlike western style, which tends to search for a center of interest. Instead, Ikebana emulates nature's asymmetry, striking a balance between heaven, earth and people, giving us a true sense of timeless beauty.

19th Annual Artists Tour

Last Saturday the 17th blazed bright and beautiful, with a hot sun and a light breeze. The day was made for daydreaming. Or biking. Or beaching. Or strolling through an antiques fair. Or shopping a farmer's market. Or... a million other things that the East End is known and loved for. But there was one particular event that was worth putting before everything else the day offered — the last of three days of The 19th Annual Artists Studio Tour.

Sponsored by the Artists Alliance of East Hampton, the Studio Tour provides access to the studios of over 60 artists who live and work on the East End, from Southampton to Amagansett to Shelter Island. Driving from village to village, searching the landscape for the next artistic display of sculpture, textiles, blown glass, painting, etching, drawing, ceramics, photography, silkscreen, collage and woodcuts, was indeed a dreamy way to spend the afternoon. Meeting the artists, hearing first-hand about their process and influences, and having the opportunity to purchase an original work were just some of the great things about making the studios tours. The artists I met were generous and welcoming.

Ticket holders also enjoyed free access to three events held during the Tour. First was the Studio Tour Party at Resort in East Hampton, which was held on Friday evening, to celebrate all the participants and contributors. Second was free admission to Guild Hall to view the work of the East End artists who have received the Guild Hall Academy of the Arts lifetime achievement award, including Willem de Kooning, Saul Steinberg and Jane Wilson (exhibition runs until August 1). Third was free entry to the Pollock-Krasner House, where there is currently a memorial exhibit of 24 drawings by Abstract Expressionist Ibram Lassaw (exhibition runs until August 1).

It was the first time I had participated, but I know it will not be the last. For information on the East Hampton Artists Alliance and all of their activities and events, call 631-324-2225 or email info@aaeh.org. —RFS

Entertainment In The Hamptons Out Of The Question

Dan's Papers presents the second round of "Out of the Question: The Hamptons Celebrity Roundtable" on Thursday, July 29 at Guild Hall. Warren Strugatch will moderate as guests address the question "When did Assimilate become a dirty word?" At one point, people who came to this country were looking to fulfill an American Dream. The general sentiment of immigrants was to become American. But now, immigrants are increasingly devoted to upholding their own cultures, and the image of the American "melting pot" has morphed into the image of a "tossed salad."

Immigration is a topic that profoundly affects the entire country, and the East End hosts a high concentration of immigrants. The impact of this is felt by the economy, the politics, and the culture of the Hamptons. Mr. Strugatch makes the point that immigration "affects the housing market, it affects schools, it affects traffic patterns, and it affects health care." Whether or not this impact is positive or negative is a loaded topic, and will inevitably be debated at the Roundtable Discussion.

The evening's panelists include pertinent speakers like Michael Caracciolo, the Suffolk County legislator and sponsor of the resolution demanding Washington's enforcement of immigration laws; Htun Han, an Amagansett real estate executive and Fire Department volunteer born in Burma; Irv Miljoner, head of the U.S. Labor Department's Long Island district for hourly wage regulation; Isabel Sepulveda de Scanlon, a Chilean journalist for Nuestra Prensa as well as a Hispanic community advocate; and James M. Staudenraus, an immigration reform advocate.

All of these speakers are informed on the subject in distinct ways, and their discussion will certainly be informative. After the panelists are each given the floor, the audience is invited to ask questions and express opinions.

An outdoor reception catered by Citarella will follow the discussion. The program begins at 8 p.m. Tickets are $12, $10 for Guild Hall members. For reservations call the box office at 324-0806. Guild Hall is located at 158 Main Street in East Hampton. —EJW

review: auntie mame...by jan silver

In the mood for an evening of antics – a combination of Lucille Ball in I Love Lucy and Bea Arthur as Maude? They are here in spirit at Bay Street Theatre's co-production of the classic comedy Auntie Mame, starring Charles Busch.

This true story of the orphaned poor-little-rich-boy who must live with his Bohemian aunt in her sophisticated Manhattan duplex is probably best known in its 1966 Jerry Herman musical version Mame with Angela Lansbury. The musical is based on Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee's play Auntie Mame starring Rosalind Russell, a Broadway hit in 1956, and the play is based on nephew Patrick Dennis's novel. Since Mame is such an over-the-top character, she is a perfect vehicle for actor/playwright Charles Busch.

Mr. Busch usually performs in his own work (The Lady in Question, Vampire Lesbians of Sodom, Die Mommie Die, etc.) and he is always convincing as a beautiful woman in costumes, wigs and make-up. The humorous dialogue, episodic story and supporting cast of pros in this production add up to an amusing evening.

The dialogue in the opening scenes, set in 1928, make the play feel dated and obvious, but when the heiress Mame loses her fortune, the play shifts to antic comedy and Mame develops as a madcap character. Auntie Mame has 14 scenes in Act I and 11 in Act II, but several are brief and zip along quickly. That allows Mr. Busch many changes of colorful, sumptuous costumes.

Busch's portrayal of Mame is two-faced. He obviously relishes her vamp possibilities and he sometimes camps it up, especially in the scene where Mame meets her intended's Southern family. At other times, Busch imparts Mame's love for her nephew Patrick, her loyal staff, and her friends.

The rest of the cast is also delightful. Penny Fuller is deliciously melodramatic as Mame's actress friend Vera Charles and Mame's mother-in-law Mother Burnside. Gordana Rashovich is a stitch as secretary Agnes Gooch and slyly vengeful as Sally Cato. Susan Pourfar is a good fit in many parts, but her "Locust Valley lockjaw" upper-crust portrayal of Gloria Upson is priceless. Jennifer Harmon is wonderful as Irish housekeeper Nora Muldoon, and first-rate as the snobbish Mrs. Upson. Kerrie Blaisdell, who got her acting start in local theater and as Bay Street's first intern, is very polished as the grown-up Patrick's wife, Pegeen.

The men's parts require equal versatility. Michael McCormick is hilarious as Mame's houseman, Ito, and the ultra-WASP Mr. Upson. Patrick Ryan Sullivan is charming as Mame's husband, Beauregard Burnside, and Victor Slezak is all buttoned-up outrage as Mr. Babcock, and sleazy lechery as Brian O'Bannion. Tolan Aman is quietly dignified as young Patrick (a fine foil for Busch's flamboyant Mame), and Max von Essen charms as the adult Patrick.

Director Richard Sabellico sets the comedy at a fast pace often verging on farce, which is very fitting for scenes such as Mame's first foxhunt. Michael Bottari and Ronald Case, the veteran theater/film/ballet design team, display great wit with the multi-purpose set and elegant costumes. Bay Street pros Eric Schlobohm (lighting) and Tony Melfa (sound) do their work with flawless expertise. Paul Huntley created wonderful wigs for Charles Busch and Gerard Kelly designed the myriad wigs needed for the rest of the cast.

Auntie Mame is a joint production of Bay Street Theatre and the Ogunquit (Maine) Playhouse. Viewed at the final preview performance, this is a warhorse comedy not seen around for awhile.

Mame plays Tuesday through Sunday evenings, with Wednesday and Saturday matinees, at Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor. It closes on August 1. Tickets ($42-54) are available at the box office, 631-725-9500, or online at www.baystreet.org.

Take Five 2004 with Jan Silver

A blockbuster week of entertainment ahead: Music Festival of the Hamptons' concerts, the new musical Green Gables in East Hampton, Charles Busch as Auntie Mame and then comedian Gilbert Gottfried in Sag Harbor, the Harry James Orchestra in Westhampton Beach, singers Leon Russell and then Steve Forbert in Amagansett, a novel/play reading at Southampton College's Writers Conference, and Bridgehampton Chamber Music Festival opening next Wednesday.

There are several interesting speakers here this week including former Times managing editor Arthur Gelb, and former New York State Chief Judge Sol Wachtler. Next Thursday, an expert panel will debate "Out of the Question: When Did Assimilate Become a Dirty Word?" at Guild Hall.

There are three special events this weekend. The L.V.I.S. Fair on Main St. in East Hampton runs from 11 a.m. on with children's activities, a flea market and more for sale. The Bridgehampton Historical Society has an all-day maritime fair with baymen demonstrating traditional fishing techniques and decoy carving. Southampton's Parrish Art Museum has well-known local writers speaking briefly about their feelings for the South Fork (6-7 p.m.) and then singer/songwriter Caroline Doctorow entertaining for the opening reception of the "North Fork/South Fork" art exhibit opening (free to Museum members, $5 for guests).

Three noteworthy benefits this Saturday: Bay Street Theatre's gala dinner dance and celebrity auction at Nova's Ark, Child Development Center's Orchid Ball at Villa Maria, and LongHouse Reserve's summer gala in East Hampton. The fifth Rock 'n' Roll concert for Long Island's Special Olympics, featuring Lou Christie and The Duprees, is next Thursday, and the first party/art auction for the Samuel Waxman

Cancer Research Foundation (Miss USA and two members of her court will be there) is next Saturday at a Bridgehampton estate ($150 tickets; call 212-241-1760).

THEATER

Charles Busch heads a fine cast in the classic comedy Auntie Mame at Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre. Performances are Tues. to Sun. through August 1 ($42-54). Popular late-night television guest, comedian Gilbert Gottfried, does his shtick at Bay Street on Monday, July 19 ($38). Call 631-725-9500 for tickets.

East Hampton's John Drew Theater continues its presentation of new work with a concert staging of the musical Green Gables, based on the L.M. Montgomery's classic novel Anne of Green Gables. Showtimes are Fri. & Sat. 8 p.m. and Sun. 2 p.m. ($28-30 adults, $25 children). Sunday at 8 p.m., Tony Walton directs a reading of Eve Sawyer's new farce, The Gleam, about a multi-national corporation's destructive activities ($18-20). Tickets to all shows are at the box office, 631-324-4050.

Southampton College's Writers Conference closes with a gala reading and party tonight, July 23, starting at 6:30 p.m. on Chancellor's Hall Lawn (rain or shine!). Bring a beach chair or blanket, and listen to the celebrated faculty and surprise guests read Splendor in the Grass. There is no charge for this event, but donations are welcome.

1. The Bartlett House Inn - Innkeeper Diane Gilmore. Family residence for more than 60 years, then a convent. Large Victorian became a B'n'B in 1982. Features include Corinthian columns, stained-glass windows, fireplace and front porch. 503 Front Street. 477-0371.
2. Basketworks & Mother - A fixture on Main Street for so long, the store itself is a kind of an antique. Inside you will find country cabinets, bookcases, wicker furniture, antique quilts, hand-made area rugs, sterling silver, jewelry, Tiffany lamps. 329 Main Street. 477-1445.
3. Bruce's Cafe / Cheese Emporium - Though this is a top source for gourmet cheeses, it is also a splendid stop for an al fresco lunch. Inside you'll find a terrific selection of fine foods, gift baskets and coffees. 208 Main Street. 477-0023.
4. Claudio's - One of the country's historic restaurants, Claudio's and its clam bar down the wharf are emblems of Greenport's past and present. Both offer waterfront dining in a relaxed, congenial setting. 111 Main Street. 477-0627.
5. Creations by Lisa - The hottest trends in apparel and accessories for Missy, Juniors and children - all at reasonable prices. Greenport's summer source for swimwear, hats, handbags, sandals, jewelry and much more. SALE DAYS GOING ON NOW!!! 123 Main Street. 477-9612.
6. Curran's Irish Shop - Perhaps the quintessentially charming Greenport specialty shop. You'll find all things Irish here! Apparel, jewelry, pottery, crystal, china, wedding gifts. Their capes and rings are perennial favorites. 119 Main Street. 477-3503.
7. Galerie Polar - Currently showing the works of Simon Allen. 818 Main Street. 477-2909.
8. Gallery M - Distinctive contemporary crafts. Here you'll find an impressive array of ceramics, sculpture, paintings and jewelry from local as well as international artists. The bi-level gallery is a visual feast and the prices are surprisingly attractive. 308 A Main Street. 477-9496.
9. Goldin Furniture Co. - Located in the historic Greenport Auditorium, circa 1894. In business over 50 years, selling brand names such as Sealy, LA-Z-Boy, Broyhill, Hunter Douglas and more. 434 Main Street. 477-0940.
10. The Greenporter Hotel & La Cuvée Wine Bar - The North Fork's exclusive deluxe designer hotel comes with a hip gourmet restaurant. Naturopathics Holistic Sun & Body Care top a list of healthy treatments available at this unique spot. 715 Front Street. 477-1005.
11. Ile de Beaufe - French cuisine in a Provencal-style dining room and courtyard. Rack or lamb in rosemary sauce reduction highlights an authentic menu. Crepe lovers exult at the restaurant's variations of this delicacy. 314 Main Street. 477-2822.

12. S.T. Preston & Co. - The North Fork's premier marine supply store anchors the Main Street Wharf. You'll also find intriguing nautical gifts, seascapes and all things salt and spray in this fascinating store. Main Street Wharf. 477-1990.
13. Scrimshaw - Greenport's latest haute cuisine hotspot is nestled at the end of Preston's Dock. Dazzling views of Shelter Island and sophisticated, eclectic fare. Main Street at Preston's Dock. 477-8882.
14. Shady Lady Inn - This opulent restaurant and inn is a delightful anachronism. Formal dining, elegantly appointed guest rooms and charmingly professional service. 405 North Road. 477-4500.
15. Stirling Harbor Trattoria - Fine Italian and Spanish cuisine in a harborfront setting 1410 Manhasset Ave. 477-3582.
16. Suki's Spa - Full-service spa with a mini home gift shop for its customers. Enhance your beauty with a facial, pedicure, manicure, body treatment, waxing, hairstyling or coloring. Their gifts are works of art. 18 Sterlington Commons. 477-1864.
17. Taste - Luxury items for the home, cupboard and jewelry box. 419 Main Street. 477-3357.
18. Terhaven Cellars - The last winery before France. Prize-winning 1998 and '99 wines on sale now plus their popular Carousel Merlot. 4th and Front Streets. 477-8737.
19. Trummer Home - Owned by renowned NYC bar chefs, Albert and Stefan, this is the leading lounge in Greenport offering the most exquisite cocktails and light fare in a European beach-like setting. 124 Front Street. 477-1880.

Calling all carnivores! The dish hears that...Robert's, normally known for chef Natalie Byrnes' amazing seafood and vegetarian dishes, is serving ribeyes like nobody's business. The Water Mill eatery reports that Natalie's new grilled 32 oz porterhouse steak with local cherry tomato salad, crumbled Gorgonzola, steakhouse roasted potatoes and aged balsamic vinegar is a huge hit. Check out another new special of Natalie's, too: double cut domestic lamb chops with grilled corn, quinoa, scalions and grilled Halsey Farm peaches. Yum!

Stopped by Chock Full O' Nuts in Southampton lately? They've brought back the famous whole-wheat doughnut, one of their classics. Try it with an iced mocha latte....

Look out Dr. Atkins... The Pizza Place, located right on Route 27 in Bridgehampton, has brought the first low-carb pizza to the East End. Made with 100% whole wheat flour, part skim mozzarella, and only 8 net carbs per slice compared to the traditional 38 carbs per slice, it makes it much easier to stick to your low-carb diet. They have also created low-carb wraps with whole-wheat tortillas loaded with fresh ingredients that come in at less than 10 net carbs each. For more info call 537-7865.

Edgewater Restaurant in Hampton Bays, overlooking picturesque Shinnecock Bay, is a great spot for a night out. They have introduced a piano bar on Friday nights. With an extensive wine list of over 100 selections, enjoy a glass with the harmonious sounds of the piano in the background. For more info call 723-2323.

George Martin in Southampton is now open every day for lunch, brunch, and dinner. Stop in and take advantage of their prix fixe for $22.95, available all night Sunday through Thursday, and Friday & Saturday from 5 p.m. - 6:30 p.m. For more info call 204-8700.

The Dish hears that...Citarella has been tagged to cater the outdoor reception following the second Out of the Question on Thursday, July 29th. Warren Strugatch of The New York Times continues his controversial celebrity round-tables at Guild Hall, featuring expert panelists and provocative discussions. # Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

New York's legendary restaurateur, Sirio Maccioni, is to be honored by the James Beard Foundation at the annual Chefs and Champagne Benefit, Saturday July 24, 5-8 p.m. The occasion celebrates the ringmaster of Le Cirque 2000 under the Big Top at Wolffer Estate Vineyards in Sagaponack. Notable chefs from New York City, Long Island, and points along the Eastern Seaboard will take part in the event featuring Champagne Charles Heidsieck; proprietor Christian Wolffer and winemaker Roman Roth will serve the estate's award-winning wines.

Sirio Maccioni, also owner of Osteria del Circo in New York and Las Vegas, will be celebrating the publication of his new book, Sirio: The Story of My Life and Le Cirque, a biography co-authored with Peter Elliot for Wiley Publishers.

Sirio's story is not about the glitz and the glamour of Le Cirque; rather it's his own story from the time he was a child in Italy. The Maccionis of Montecatini were more fortunate than most; they were landowners beginning with Sirio's great-grandfather Serafino. Another valuable family asset were the handsome sons, who always seem to come in threes. Though from a poor farming family, his father, a handsome, charming man with an ability for language broke the chain by working in the hotel business. Sirio remembers his father as a gentleman who wore fine clothes for his work as a concierge in a hotel that was "so clean with beautiful people."

Sadly, Sirio lost both parents at an early age, but the warmth and love of his grandparents and surrounding family and his father's legacy, which dared him to pursue his dream, left a powerful impression on this driven young man.

Born in 1932, he suffered the ravages of war. After his father was killed by a bomb, life was difficult, but Sirio was a survivor. "The whole scary mess only made him stronger, more forward and disciplined." The decision to work in a restaurant was not a choice – as a war orphan he had the right to attend the only hotel school that was still functioning.

Sirio is simply a fascinating read. His rise to the top took him on a working journey to post-war

Paris, to Germany, and a cruise ship to the Americas, which stood to give him a solid foundation. He was there at the beginning of the food revolution through his association with Roger Verge, Paul Bocuse and the Troigros brothers. He understood creativity in the kitchen and the line between service and the ultimate professional and mostly, he understood "the way you really shine is being the best." He ultimately became New York's most famous maitre d'hotel – he always knew where he was, what he was doing, and why. He was also very discreet, but with that Tuscan charm and his own style of flirtation. Yet his love for his family was first and foremost – "the only person who ever really inspired him" is his wife Egidiana. She perhaps single handedly created pasta primavera, which Le Cirque was so famous for. This recipe, along with many other Le Cirque classics, is printed in this revealing and inspiring book.

LE CIRQUE'S PASTA PRIMAVERA

Millions of versions came after this original recipe. To simplify the execution, Sirio blanches all the vegetables in one pot of boiling water, and then cooks the pasta in it as well.

Serves 4-6

6 tablespoons olive oil

1 1/2 cups plum tomatoes, peeled, chopped and seeded or whole can San Marzano tomatoes, chopped, seeded and drained

2 cloves garlic, minced

Coarse sea or kosher salt

2 cups porcini or button mushrooms, roughly chopped

Freshly ground pepper

1 cup asparagus tips, 1 cup broccoli florets and 1 medium zucchini, quartered and cut into 1-inch lengths, each blanched in boiling salted water for 4 minutes and drained

1/2 cup frozen peas, thawed in boiling salted water and drained

1 cup heavy cream

2/3 cup grated Parmigiano Reggiano, plus extra for garnish

2 tablespoons unsalted butter

1 pound spaghetti

1/2 cup pignoli nuts, lightly toasted

2 tablespoons chiffonade of basil

1. Heat 2 tablespoons of the olive oil in a medium sauté pan over high heat. Add the tomatoes, half the garlic, and a pinch of salt and cook until the tomatoes have rendered most of their juice and begun to color, stirring occasionally, about 4-8 minutes. Keep warm.

2. Heat 2 tablespoons olive oil in a medium sauté pan over high heat and sauté the mushrooms with the remaining garlic and a pinch of salt until they've given off most of their water and are nicely browned, about 8-10 minutes. Season to taste and keep warm.

3. Heat the remaining 2 tablespoons olive oil over medium-high heat in a large sauté pan, add the remaining garlic, and sauté the blanched vegetables until they've taken on a little color but are still firm, about 5 minutes. Season to taste and keep warm. Bring a large pot of salted water to a boil and cook the spaghetti. Meanwhile, reduce the cream in a pan large enough to hold the cooked spaghetti and vegetables, stir in the Parmesan and butter, and turn the heat to low.

4. When the spaghetti is 1 or 2 minutes shy of al dente, drain and transfer it to the pan with the reduced cream to finish cooking. Add mushrooms and toss, then the vegetables and portion into warm plates. Garnish servings with toasted pignoli, 2 spoonfuls of the tomato sauce, pinches of basil chiffonade, and Parmesan. Serve at once.

CRÈME BRULÉE LE CIRQUE

This original recipe is still being prepared at Le Cirque – often 300 times a day.

Serves 8

1 quart heavy cream

1 Tahitian vanilla bean, halved and scraped

1/2 cup plus 8 tablespoons granulated sugar

8 egg yolks, in a bowl large enough to hold all the recipe's ingredients

Preheat oven to 300 degrees

1. Combine the cream, vanilla, and 1/2 cup sugar in a saucepan, warming the mixture over low heat until hot to the touch, about 110 degrees, stirring occasionally

2. Temper the egg yolks with 1 or 2 tablespoons of the warmed cream mixture, by stirring the cream together with the yolks to warm them through.

Pour the remainder of the cream into a bowl with the yolks and stir to blend.

3. Pass the mixture through a chinois or fine mesh strainer into a clean bowl or back into the pan the cream mixture was warmed in, using the back of a spoon to make sure as much of the scraped vanilla as possible passed through the strainer.

4. Place 8 ramekins in a shallow roasting pan. Ladle the cream mixture into the ramekins, filling each one a ladleful at a time to ensure the vanilla is evenly distributed. Create a water bath for the custards by pouring enough hot water into the baking pan (for ease use a tea kettle) to come halfway up the sides of the ramekins. Cover the ramekins with a sheet of foil and bake for 1 hour and 15 minutes. The custards are done when they look firm and tremble just slightly in the center. Chill for at least 3 hours and up to 3 days.

5. Just before serving, sprinkle each custard with 1 tablespoons granulated sugar and "brulee" with a kitchen torch on full power from about 1 1/2 inches away, browning but not burning the sugar. Serve immediately.

not the middle of the road

From the time you walk in the door of this charmingly and whimsically appointed restaurant, you know that the very talented MaryJane has not just lent her name to the restaurant but has brought to it every aspect of her innate sense of style and flair, which ensures that her guests will leave having had a truly memorable dining experience.

Comfortable couches in the bar area, the different dining areas throughout the restaurant, including a library section, the blazing fireplaces (yes even in mid June) and the doors wide open to the street make you wonder whether you are in the heart of a city, in the country, in the US or in Europe. The truth is you may well be in all of these for this is part of the visual creation which makes first time visitors intrigued and regular customers glad to be back once again.

MaryJane's has been one of the star restaurants of East Hampton for awhile and things keep changing for the better and this year is no different; MaryJane has recruited a talented young executive chef, Ken Ruud, from the House of Blues in New Orleans who is a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America. Ken joins an already formidable culinary team of Antonio Rios and Edwin Vargas and their new summer menu has just been unveiled. Another innovation is the great piano music served up by the very talented and personable Rick McDonald on Friday and Saturday nights from 9.30 till late. Membership in the “The MaryJane Singers” is drawn from diners and late evening drinkers and provides a great way to finish a fun evening, grouped around the grand piano as Rick plays requests and effortlessly segues music from one decade to another.

We started our meal with their excellent bruschetta, full of earthy flavors and then sampled grilled Portobello mushrooms served with fire roasted peppers, Romano cheese and aged balsamic with baby field greens on pesto grilled bread. Here all the flavors were so unmistakably Italian. An unusual new appetizer is lamb chops roasted with garlic and rosemary and served with baby greens, pine nuts, Gorgonzola cheese and black pepper-lingonberry vinaigrette. I never refuse lamb chops and these were excellent in texture and flavor. Finally we tasted another new addition, the crab cake seared with shrimp, red peppers and scallions in a lemon-grass coconut cream sauce. This was definitely not Italian but it was wonderful!

Naturally MaryJane's has a first rate selection of home made pastas and we chose the lobster ravioli which paired delicate pasta, perfectly al dente, with tasty pieces of flavorful lobster paired with thyme and pecorino cheese and served with a delicate but enchanting sauce of mushrooms, green onion and tomato.

Another newcomer to the menu is MaryJane's Three Fish, which, this night, brought together tuna, salmon and flounder, all prepared differently but with each fish having a significant part to play in the success of the total dish. This is certainly a dish for fish lovers to hone in on.

Desserts at MaryJane's are everything you would expect and it is imperative to leave space for their famed flan or cassata cake or bread pudding, for be warned: no one leaves MaryJane's hungry, as portions are substantial.

Appetizers range from $6 to $11; main courses from $15 to $26 and they have a very reasonable prix fixe menu, available every night except Saturday, for $19.95.

RECOMMENDATION:

Without actually experiencing the ambience of MaryJane's it is very hard to envision it. (If you listed all of the attributes considered essential for a really top-flight restaurant then you will find all of these here so it is very easy to see why MaryJane's is so highly regarded.) MaryJane's is not a restaurant where you have to be on the so-called “A-List” to be treated specially. Because to MaryJane everyone who walks through the door is extra-special. The new executive chef has moved the cooking standards up several notches from its already high level and this should be your restaurant of choice if you really value great surroundings, excellent food, pleasant staff and great value for money.

Dining in the Hamptons

Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton was surprisingly empty last Monday evening around 7:30. I wondered where everyone was as I headed to dinner at Suki Zuki, in Water Mill. I got my answer a few minutes later. Everyone was at Suki Zuki.

And happy about it. The peals of laughter, the clink of glasses, the oohs and ahs over presentation and flavor filled the small room with a party-at-capacity feeling, but even the overflow, those waiting at the bar, or waiting in the doorway, smiled in anticipation and a shared enthusiasm for the restaurant and its charming owner, Toyo.

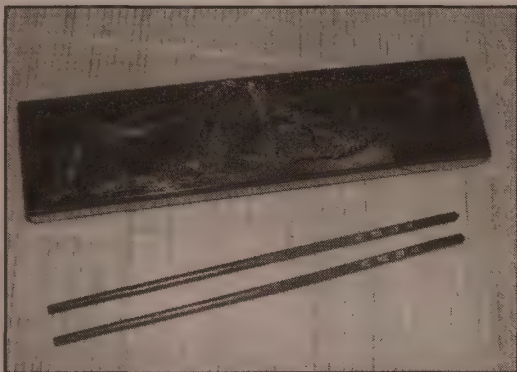

I saw two very pregnant women, no doubt choosing from the extensive cooked entrée portion of the menu, an elderly couple eating their meal at the bar, a group of college-age girls, giggling up a storm about something, businessmen and their well-dressed wives, women post-tennis, young families with toddlers...in other words, everyone I could imagine. The only requirement for dining at Suki Zuki is to bring your cheerful spirits and sense of wonder.

My two friends and I ordered a slightly outrageous amount of food, if there is such a quantity. We couldn't help it. Our heads swirled from table to table, tray to tray, from sushi bar to sushi bar (one in the front and one in the back) as we tried to decide. We wanted to narrow it down, we really did. But we didn't. Instead, we enjoyed, in no particular order: teriyaki chicken salad with shredded grilled chicken, crispy noodles and shredded lettuce and bean sprouts in a creamy ginger dressing; shumai, delicate, sweet steamed shrimp dumplings with a soy sauce, rice wine vinegar, chili sesame oil, sliced scallion and sesame seed dressing dipping sauce; and seaweed salad that was a riot of color, comprised of purple, light green and dark green seaweed and shredded carrots in a carrot dressing. That's not all, but I have to take a deep breath, even as I am writing.

Next, we tried a special, the Suki Zuki steamed won ton ravioli, popping with salmon and shrimp and dolloped with a wasabi mayonnaise. Spicy and textured, these arrived at the same time as the robata grilled skewers of shrimp and eggplant. Delicious, light, ultimately shareable. There is an extensive choice of robata, and they are ordered individually so you can taste all or some. We also shared two of the most incredible fish dishes I've ever tasted, divine in their simplicity, but complex in their tastes. The first was a special, misoyaki salmon, a fillet of miso-marinated Atlantic salmon that flaked apart at the touch of the chopsticks and held a richness that was unexpected. It's not easy to compete with the strong flavor that the salmon is born with, but this combination of ingredients turned this rather predictable fish into something quite special.

Finally, the piece de resistance of the small dishes. I really try not to use superlatives (or French) when I write restaurant reviews, but in the case of the grilled miso black cod, I cannot help myself. It is quite possibly the greatest thing I have ever eaten. There, I broke the rules. But wow. Wow. The texture of this fish inspires the most wonderful emotions, ranging from desperation (to slow down and savor every second of every mouthful), to the desire to physically to roll around in this fish, were that possible. I asked our adorable (oops) and ever smiling waitress, Marce, what the secret is, and she laughed. Everyone wants to know, and here it is. There is no secret. It is simply a fillet of black cod, marinated in miso paste and then grilled. Sure.

We mused over what to do now. We were so happy, so stuffed and so....not finished. Sushi, anyone? We asked Marce to recommend a selection of sushi and sashimi for us to sample, and she did one better. Out came an enormous round platter, gloriously overflowing with salmon, sweet raw shrimp, yellowtail, tuna, eel, fluke, grouper, escaler (white and silky, similar to Chilean sea bass) and probably more that I cannot even remember, in all imaginable configurations - inside-out rolls, over rice as "sushi", alone, sashimi style, lightly covered in a Japanese basil leaf, rolled around Daikon radish sprouts...a purely fun explosion of bright colors, fresh flavors, and sensual textures.

Toyo arrived to check on our happiness level, and we were beaming. He insisted that we try a carafe of Kaori, lightly flavored with banana and muscatel grapes. Well versed in hot sake, but naive to the pleasures of the smooth and delicate enjoyment of chilled sake, the three of us excitedly agreed to taste

Natural Sweet Delights

Jerome M. Smucker pressed cider at a mill in Ohio in 1987. Soon after, he made apple butter that was packaged in crocks with a hand-signed seal and his personal guarantee of quality. We all know where that led Smucker. Today, more than $630 million in retail sales represent the market that includes jams, jellies, fruit spreads and preserves. These sweet delights are ever so popular and constantly evolving with new and interesting flavors. With so many brands on the market today, there is a wide selection to choose from.

In 1998, after a visit to a farmers' market in Northern California and a growing fear of being stuck in a corporate job forever, Amy Acierno was inspired to start her own business of making preserves. Amy always enjoyed cooking and had previously made preserves, but she wanted to learn more. After receiving her certification from Cornell Better Processing School, where she was taught everything from preparation to the proper packaging and sealing, she was ready to move forward. And so, she formed Miss Amy's Preserves. In the beginning she started making 4 all-natural flavors that included strawberry, raspberry, peach and cranberry jalepeño. But it wouldn't be long before she began experimenting with other combinations, and she even created her own special hearty mustard made with Blue Point Brewery's Oatmeal Stout.

Jams, preserves, and mustards aren't just meant for toast and sandwiches, and all of Amy's products can be used for cooking. Here are just a few examples of recipes that incorporate her condiment:

FRUIT AND PASTRY ROLL UPS

1 frozen puff pastry sheet, thawed

1/2 cup sugar (about)

1/2 cup Miss Amy's Pear Preserves

PREHEAT oven to 400F. Roll out pastry sheet on work surface. Lightly brush pastry with water. Starting at the edge, roll puff pastry up tightly, jelly-roll style. Cut pastry into rounds with a sharp knife. Spread 1/2-cup sugar in an even layer on a plate. Press 1 pastry round into sugar. Set round on baking sheet sugar side up, tucking end under. Repeat with remaining rounds. Press the center of each round with your finger to form a small hollow. Spoon 1 tsp. Miss Amy's Pear Preserves into each hollow. Sprinkle pastries with additional sugar and bake until golden brown, about 20 minutes.

Amy Acierno of Miss Amy's Preserves

GRILLED CHICKEN WITH MISS AMY'S CRANBERRY JALAPENO MARINADE

Serves 4

4 boneless skinless chicken breasts, trimmed and pounded flat

1 - 8 oz jar Miss Amy's Spicy Cranberry Jalapeno Spread

1 jigger (or to taste) fine quality tequila

1 medium lime

Vegetable oil

Sea salt

Fresh ground black pepper

Prepare coals for grilling.

FOR MARINADE: In a large ceramic bowl combine Miss Amy's Spicy Cranberry Spread and tequila. Cut lime in half and ream juice from both sides into cranberry tequila marinade.

Spoon a generous amount of cranberry tequila marinade onto chicken breasts and continue grilling until chicken is a little crispy on the edges and marinade is heated through, approximately 3-5 minutes. (Alternatively, chicken may be grilled in 2 batches in a hot well-seasoned ridged grill pan over moderately high heat.)

Transfer to a platter and serve immediately with sweet Long Island corn on the cob, baby red roasted potatoes, and a leafy green salad. Ice cold beer (I recommend Blue Point Brewery's Summer Ale) is the perfect beverage accompaniment.

The process of making preserves is time-consuming. Peeling, cutting and preparing of the fruit takes a lot of patience and Amy cooks 6 to 7 hours a day, 4 days per week. She believes in using all-natural products to maintain an authentic taste, just like grandma used to. It's equally important to use the proper cooking pans. Amy uses a solid copper jam pan with an extra wide mouth from Belgium. Loaves and Fishes Cookshop in Bridgehampton has a great selection to choose from. The fun thing about making preserves is that you can create your very own flavors with your favorite fruit combinations. Enjoy!

—Kelly Krieger

Miss Amy's Preserves can be found locally at Loaves and Fishes in Sagaponack, Bates Bakeshop in Southampton and Mary's Marvelous in Amagansett. Also at Bayport Flower Houses, Blue Point Brewing Co., Pausewang's Peacock Farm, The Culinary Studio, The Cooks Fancy and Carleton & Dayne. it. It was delicious. There is an extensive sake menu, and each type is described in a paragraph of prose to help you decide among the light and smooth, fragrant, rich and unfiltered types. They are served hot or cold, in a glass, box, carafe or bottle.

All that was left was dessert, and one more look around the room. It was 2 hours later, and the place was still buzzing with activity. Green tea ice cream arrived, a bowlful with three spoons. It is such a light and refreshing treat that we passed up on the richer and heavier fried ice cream and fried banana. But there is always next time.

—Robin F. Smith

Suki Zuki is open 7 days for lunch from 12-2:30 p.m. and for dinner, from 6-10:30 p.m. on weekdays and until 11 p.m. on weeknights. The sake prices range from $6 a glass up to $92 for a premium bottle. Prices for sushi, sashimi, appetizers and specials are so reasonable, ($5-$20) that you too will be encouraged to try everything.

Pull Up A Stool At The Raw Bar

If you are not adventurous enough for mountain climbing or bungee jumping, you can always just go out to dinner. Your next meal could be the most daring, exciting experience you have had in while, assuming of course, you go to a raw bar. And depending on personal preference, it could also be either one of the most enjoyable or most sickening experiences.

Appealing or not, a raw bar is simple: a bar of raw food. Raw seafood to be precise. (Salivating already, aren't you?) A raw bar can be a restaurant itself or found within one. It offers a selection of raw shellfish, fish, and occasionally other foods. It also contains sushi items. And that is simply it.

Or almost. The simplicity plays an important part in a raw bar and is seen as one of its most appealing attributes. Raw bars subscribe to the theory that less is more. The less tampered with a food is, the more nutrients it retains. In a society of mass production and a time of preservatives and Wonder Bread, the raw bar offers a return to basics. The clam on your plate looks much like it did lying on the ocean floor.

However, during the journey from sea to silverware, simplicity can get complicated. While the fisherman may simply pull the fish from the water, the chef has free range over the food. A raw bar chef, denied of a chance to actually cook, can show off his arranging skills. Items in a raw bar display case often resemble exotic deep-sea flowers with feathery parsley leaves.

Other items are still left in their more natural state. Oysters and clams are most frequently seen served on the half shell. In fact, oysters, being the most popular item, become their own pearl in the oyster of a raw bar. Many people cite the simple slurping of the oysters from their shell as a reason for their enjoyment of them. I have not yet made it to that point. I have spent too many years working in restaurants, seeing the oysters stubbornly pried open, caveman-style, to associate them with simplicity and ease. Someone ordering a dozen oysters makes my heartbeat increase and my mind flash to waitress mode, including frantic searches through restaurant kitchens trying to find someone strong enough to open the shells for me.

Yet this is a personal hang-up of mine, and not one encountered at a raw bar. There, professional chefs create raw concoctions with skill and ease. Most remarkably, they also make their tiny dishes with passion. The chef is usually right in front of customers in a raw bar, chatting with them as they eat. Raw bar chefs are famous for their desire to explain their craft to their guests. So if you are brave enough to try a raw bar, but still have some lingering questions, feel free to ask. Raw bar chefs are very involved with their customers and often develop regulars, as in a bar serving alcohol.

In fact, the friendly relationship with the server is only one of the features that makes raw bars similar to regular bars. The selection of raw delicacies on display in glass cases has been compared to the assortment of bottles behind the bartender. Raw bars also tend to be open late and exude a lively, hip vibe popular with the young and the agelessly trendy.

Raw bars are all the rage. Like most raging things, they are also something at which my father shakes his head and gives a soft, sigh-infused laugh. I imagine he would apply his theory of camping to raw bars. For thousands of years, he explains, humans have been trying to get indoors, into shelters. Now suddenly they all want to move back outside. I predict that his reasoning would follow that for thousands of years humans have tried to harness the power of fire, gas, and electricity to cook their food. Now suddenly everyone goes out on a Saturday night and pays money to eat it raw.

However, raw bars are not quite so modern as they seem. About one hundred and fifty years ago, America saw its share of raw. Oyster bars were the predecessors to raw bars and were found most plentifully in the ocean-oriented areas of the Chesapeake Bay and New England. Raw bars are still popular in places such as Washington D.C. and Boston where seafood is readily available and enjoyed. They are also popular in New York City and here in the Hamptons. Jean-Luc East on Montauk Highway in East Hampton is one such restaurant that offers a raw bar. Raw bars are almost everywhere. Give them a try. That is, if you are daring enough to demonstrate raw courage and eat your seafood to match.

—Renée Donlon

Preparing Fresh Fish From Start to Finish

As anyone who has ever eaten a freshly caught fish can tell you, a whole fish retains its shape and flavor better than fillets, so buying a whole fish from your local fishmonger and filleting it yourself is preferable to buying fillets already prepackaged. Here is a simple procedure for creating fillets. You will need a cutting board or flat surface, a thin flexible blade for cutting along the backbone, and a broad flat blade for removing the hard skin.

With knife in hand, hold the fish flat on the cutting board and pierce the skin behind the front dorsal fin. Slice diagonally across the fish, cutting to, but not through, the backbone. Hold the fish by the head and run the blade down the backbone towards the tail with a sawing motion. Don't try to cut too much of the fillet off the backbone at this stage.

When near the tail region, hold the knife flat against the backbone and push the point right through the side of the fillet. With the knife protruding out the other side, cut through the remaining fillet towards the tail. Peel the fillet back with one hand while cutting the fillet away from the backbone using small slicing motions. Be careful not to cut too much away in one stroke. It is better to use many small cuts, guiding the knife along any bony structures to remove the flesh.

The most difficult task is to remove the fillet from the rib cage area, and a very sharp knife is essential. Using small strokes, feel your way around the bones, eventually completely removing one side of the flesh. Turn the fish over, making sure to hold the fish fairly flat on the cutting surface, and repeat the procedure to remove the other fillet. Some fishermen will keep the first fillet loosely attached to the backbone to improve the "shape" of the fish and make it easier to work to remove the second fillet. Some culinary experts regard the best tasting part of any fish to be the "wings," second only to the meat found at the back of the head. Break or cut them off whole and save them for the barbecue. Now you have two superb fillets, the wings, and the carcass.

Next comes the removal of the skin (note that the fish has not been scaled and this is not necessary). Hold the tough skin in one hand and, using the flat-bladed knife, slice a small portion of the flesh away from the skin. Cut a "finger hole" into the skin. Hold the skin by the finger hole and, using the broad-bladed knife, gently remove the skin from the remaining fillet. It is important to hold the knife at the correct angle and to pull on the skin, not push or cut with the knife. Holding the blade too flat will result in a jagged cutting action and probably leave some skin on; hold it too upright and you will slice through the skin and make it difficult to restart the procedure. Expect some trial and error until you work the blade to achieve the right angle.

Now that you have all these wonderful fillets at hand, here are a few suggestions as to how to go about cooking them.

Flounder, sole, and haddock are light, delicate fish served best either baked or broiled. When baking, keep the oven pretty hot (375° - 400° F) and use a baking pan or dish lined with foil. You can use olive oil, a little white wine, onions, capers - whatever you like. You can also stuff fillets with spinach and cheese, sprinkle with breadcrumbs and bake. Make sure to allow 10 minutes per inch of thickness.

Fish with thick scales such as snapper, salmon, and red fish can be put directly on the grill. Keep the scales and skin on the fillet and place it scales down on the grill. Get the fire as hot as possible. While cooking, paint the fillets with olive oil or your favorite marinade. Keep the lid closed and check the fish with a fork every few minutes. The fish will cook quickly with the high heat, so keep an eye on it.

You will soon discover that different ingredients go better with different fish, so don't be afraid to experiment. A little experimentation will help make your next fish encounter a little more enjoyable.

-Frank McChristian

The Pimple

One of the worst parts of being a human being is getting a pimple on your face. I'm not talking about just a little pimple, I'm talking about the super pimple, the mother of all pimples. The big, giant, red one the lands right smack on your nose. The one that is so big that when you walk by people in the street their eyes sort of meet yours and then turn away. You then realize to yourself that they were not looking into your eyes, they were looking at the giant third eye on your nose! This is such a cruel world.

I don't understand God or Mother Nature or the Force or whatever you want to call it sometimes. I just don't get why they had to make our faces work this way. It's like in order to have a great body you need to work out a lot. In order for this to happen your face needs to sweat. When your face sweats you get oil on your face. When you get oil on your face your pores get clogged and then the next thing you know, WHAM, there is a big red one right on your nose. It's not fair.

The thing about a zit is that you never see it coming. No matter how often you wash your face and make sure that you are clean, a zit will sneak up on you out of nowhere. You could be having the best day too. Everything about your day could be going great. You could find a hundred dollars in the street, but if a zit is on your nose, that hundred dollars feels like nothing. A zit always attacks you by surprise.

There are some people out there that never really get pimples. I hate these people. I am completely jealous of these people. These are the people that wash their faces with regular soap in the morning and have perfectly clear skin for the rest of their lives. The other thing that gets me about these people is that they think it is totally normal to not have zits and they think that it is weird when people do have them. They think to themselves that the reason they have clear skin is because of how they wash their faces. They think it has nothing to do with their genetics and they take for granted the whole issue. It makes me sick to my stomach.

I had a zit on my nose two days ago. Now it is more like a scab because I attacked it using my entire arsenal of chemical and biological zit weapons for three hours straight. It was right on the side of my nose and it hurt like hell and was ugly as anything. I think now that I am no longer a teenager my zits have grown more and more powerful. I can remember popping a zit with ease when I was in high school. Now when I get a zit they are much stronger. They hide underground, they are organized, and they use the internet, all red and achy. When I go to squeeze them these days, I can't find the center. I can't find the clogged pore, it is just kind of there.

I started off the battle two days ago using barbaric weapons, my index fingers. Using all of my strength, I squeezed the living life out of this red mass of evil on my nose. It wouldn't pop for some reason, my eyes started to tear. I decided to call in my infantry, "Pete!" (My roommate)

"Yeah Dave what is it?"

"Do you have any zit stuff?"

"Yeah, it's on the shelf."

I looked over to the shelf and saw some of Pete's Proactive face wash and zit cream. I washed my face, it burned, but it felt good because I felt like I was killing stuff. REVENGE! I dried my face and put on some of the cream and sat in the living room. I wasn't satisfied. I was started to touch it, I could feel the oil on my fingers. The oil, it was what started this whole thing in the first place. I sat for five minutes and went back into the bathroom. War was just beginning.

I grabbed some rubbing alcohol and a Q-tip and pushed down hard. It burned like hell. "AHHHHH-HH!"

"Dave what are you doing in there?"

"Nothing!"

My nose now looked redder and grosser than it did before. This is always the case with me. If I just left it alone, I would have been better off, but for some reason I feel compelled to continue attacking. I squeezed with Q-tips, I washed again, I fired missiles, and I used witch hazel, nothing! Nothing was making this thing go away. Why do I seriously think that this is going to help the situation? By bombing and attacking this zit I am just aggravating it more. I am just making my situation worse. Now, my entire face is susceptible to even more zits.

Cycling Across America to Help Wounded Soldiers

With summer now underway, there comes a season of charity events all over the East End. However, East Hampton resident Chris Carney is taking to the streets of America to help wounded soldiers and their families. His project is called Soldier Ride. On August 24, Carney will leave from Montauk Point and bicycle ride 4,200 miles to San Francisco to raise money for the Wounded Warrior Project of the United Spinal Association (www.unitedspinal.org), a non-profit organization. Money raised will go towards helping soldiers wounded in Iraq, Afghanistan, and other parts of the world.

Carney came up with the bicycle ride idea after a friend of his held a couple of fundraising events in the Hamptons that were not as successful as they would have liked. Originally, Carney wanted to raise money to help two or three soldiers but, after he heard about the Wounded Warrior Project and its positive responses, he realized that more money could be raised working with a non-profit. Money raised will go towards providing aid packages to soldiers staying at the hospital, travel and accommodations for families to stay while visiting their loved ones, job placement, and other issues they will face when readjusting to civilian life. The government only pays for one family member for one week to visit every six months.

Carney says that he had to help in some way after visiting with wounded soldiers at the Walter Reed Hospital in Washington. There are over 4,500 victims with gunshot wounds, burns, and injuries from explosions. Many of them will have to continue with their lives with single and double amputations and disfiguring scars from multiple operations.

"After meeting with a number of wounded soldiers, there was no turning back," recalls Carney. "We went to Walter Reed Hospital and toured the floor and handed out backpacks of complimentary items. The soldiers we met were supportive of what we were doing and two guys wanted to ride with me through their hometowns. Most of the guys are just psyched that awareness is being raised."

Carney says that most of the people he spoke to do not feel sorry for themselves and that their biggest worry was how they would get a job when they come back home. "They should get four star treatment," says Carney, who worries that veterans are forgotten once their service is complete. Carney says that seeing the wounded soldiers up close puts the war in a perspective that television cannot do. "It personalized it, seeing the faces," he said. "The young and the old. They are real, not like a tree falling in the woods."

Mr. Carney has never ridden as far or as much as he is about to this summer and he is busy cycling as much as he can to build up the endurance. He is also getting pointers from local cyclists, and Cycle Path Bikes in East Hampton is providing him with the bike to make the trip. He says he must ride close to one hundred miles per day (or within 50 days) so that he will be past the furious winter of the Colorado Rocky Mountains. Although friends of Carney have said they would like to accompany him across America, he said with a laugh that he does not know how many will show up. However, a support vehicle will follow him all the way to San Francisco.

"We'd like to raise a million dollars," says Carney. "We are trying to get in touch with as many clubs in the towns we will be going through to help them to put a local face on it and to raise money and awareness. We need people to suck it up a little and give."

Donations are set up in a three-tier system: white, $420 (ten cents per mile) or less; Red, between $420 and $4,200 ($1.00 per mile); and blue, donations over $4,200. To date, $24,543.80 has been raised, and according to their web site, Soldier Ride guarantees at least 80% of the money raised will go to the wounded soldiers and their families. Anyone interested in donating can call (631) 267-3142, or visit www.soldierride.com.

Carney says that the response to his cause has been overwhelming and that people from both political parties and people who were for and against the war in Iraq are contributing to Soldier Ride and other fundraising events.

On June 28, the coalition handed over authority to a sovereign Iraqi government. Although American troops will still be there fighting and providing security in great numbers, we can only hope for the day when they will all come home alive.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Having read a review of the new 2005 Porsche 911 in Autoweek magazine, it seems to me that the biggest change in the new model is the return to simple round headlights, a throwback to the past and a shift from the previous model's futuristic oblong headlamps. I found this interesting quote by Wolfgang Durheimer, Porsche's executive Vice President of Research and Development, who said, "Our decision to return to round headlights seems to be a particularly important issue for the interested public, as we read in newspapers and magazines. Indeed they speak of our new headlights evoking a feeling of joy and appreciation." Upon reading this lofty quote, my initial thought was that Porsche enthusiasts should get a life. Stop focusing on every subtle change the factory makes on their classic 911 model. The reason they changed the "face" of the new car is that the nose was virtually identical to the Porsche Boxster, which is a much less expensive model. Of course, Porsche 911 owners were offended by this resemblance since theirs is the more pricey vehicle. This bold and radical design change, by conservative Porsche standards, made me wonder what it would be like if other lost automotive details were reintroduced.

Vent windows. These were wonderful little triangle-shaped pieces of glass that could be cracked open or flipped around like an aileron to force air into a car. Great for ventilation and especially useful for keeping one awake when in full flap position.

The magnificent 1955 Mercedes 300SL Gullwing coupe had enormous vent windows that when "flapped" out almost acted as speed brakes.

Folding windshields. The last car that I owned with that detail was a Volkswagen Type 181, which sounds a lot more imposing than its name, "The

The 2005 Porsche 911

Thing." All of my early MGs had them. A favorite was the one on the Austin Healy 100 which, unlike the MGs, worked on a clever pivot system that allowed the Healy windshield to be racked halfway down. With the windshield down, the experience was like driving a four wheeled motorcycle. Forty miles per hour felt like seventy. As good a time as it was, smiling was not an option, for fear of a mouthful of bugs.

Four door convertibles. It is a pain to squeeze into the back seat of today's modern convertibles. For years, four door ragtops were made by every manufacturer, from Ford to Duesenberg. Those most admired were, of course, the dual cowl phaetons, with little windshields in front of the back seats. With the retro craze today, why hasn't any auto maker had the foresight to build this kind of vehicle?

Real wood station wagons. With vintage woodies worth more than convertibles, it certainly shows me that wooden cars are appreciated by the public. The phony plastic and wood decals used on today's current rendition of woodies fool no one. The curved ash and mahogany woodwork on all of the older station wagons were artfully done and a joy to behold. With modern manufacturing techniques, wood bodies can easily be manufactured again, if only someone would have the imagination.

Manual hand throttles. Today, boats have them and so do airplanes. Years ago, every car, besides having an accelerator pedal, had a manual hand throttle. They were great if you wanted to change the idle of the engine, say to make it warm up faster or perhaps to give the battery a stronger charge, especially in the old generator days. I sometimes used them as a primitive cruise control device. If you really miss them and are mechanical-

OVER THE RIVER AND THROUGH THE WOODS WITH KEN KINDLER

Hither Hills

If you love being near the water, you will love this hike; when you walk it you will visit three bodies of water. If I were walking at top speed, I could easily complete this hike in two hours, but it has never taken me less than five. I feel the need to stop and swim in (or at least gaze upon) each body of water. Last Friday, I decided I needed a mini-holiday so I headed out east, right into the Shinnecock Hills bottleneck. The traffic crawled all the way to Bridgehampton. I was in the car for two hours and my eyeballs were floating. Traveling east a short distance past the Dan's Papers building, on the left side I found, between Thayer's Hardware and the Golden Pear Café, a parking lot and a public restroom. I lucked out, found a parking space and the men's room was free. Feeling much relieved, I continued my journey east through Amagansett, taking the left fork (where Route 27 splits into Montauk Highway and Old Montauk Highway) and traveling one half mile to Hither Hills West Overlook parking area.

In my rush to get out of the house, I had forgotten to bring along a map, so I turned away from the breathtakingly beautiful panoramic view and walked to the east end of the parking lot, where, secluded from sight by luxuriantly leafed oak limbs, is an information kiosk. Posted there is an excellent map of the Park with complimentary interpretive material and trails maps. You can use one of these maps to follow the route I took.

I walked back to the west end of the parking lot, past the two new informational kiosks and followed the nearby sign to the Petticoat Hill Trail. I then followed the North Trail for a few yards, making a right and a quick left onto Elisha's Valley Trail, then again after a short walk, a right and quick left, this time walking on Old Tar Road for a few yards. I crossed over the railroad tracks, then took a right turn onto the Paumanok Path. This portion of the Path is known as the Stephen Talkhouse Path. It will take you to Fresh Pond. After visiting the pond, I continued to Fresh Pond

Black racer

I then followed Old North Road for a short distance north to get to the Ocean View Trail. This trail has loose rocks in places, so watch your footing. During the winter, when there are no leaves on the trees, you can see the ocean from parts of this trail. At the south end of the Ocean Trail, I turned right onto the Serpent's Back Trail and walked a short distance, then followed the Parkway Trail back to the parking lot. At this point, I was all hot, sweaty, and anxious to take another swim, so I headed back out on the Petticoat Trail, and then instead of turning right, I headed left onto the North Trail and followed it over Montauk Highway. I traveled 0.4 miles to a fork in the trail and turned right, then after a very short distance, arrived at Old Montauk Highway. I walked diagonally across Old Montauk Highway and then across the parking lot, down the stairs, past the comfort stations, and cut across the camping area, where I looked for the sign that says "Bathing Between Green Flags." There I found a trail that cuts across the dunes to the ocean beach. Ah, more water and another swim.

On the way back to the Overlook, I met a man who was parked in the Overlook parking area. He asked me where he could get a map of the trails. You need to really look for that informational kiosk; it's so easy to get swept away by the view. Have a great time!

ly adept, you can hook one up on any car made today.

Running boards. Clyde Barrow used them as he and Bonnie escaped from bank heists. I think they are neat-looking and would certainly work best on SUVs, where they actually would be practical. The Lincoln Navigator has faux running boards that retract. How about running boards that go up and down electrically like little elevators. This would help anyone getting into an unusually tall vehicle.

Hood ornaments. Except for Mercedes, Jaguar, and Rolls Royce, I can't think of any car manufacturer who uses them. Most of them are pure sculpture and commonplace on classic cars. They are all magnificent, from the Oldsmobile Rocket 88 to the Perce Arrow lady with the bow.

Much more is missed such as rumble seats, wide whitewalls, tall tires, side curtains, cheap Ferraris, engines you can see, chrome bumpers and dashboards, plus of course, our uncomplicated old friend, the carburetor. As evidenced by the current retro cars in the market, a blending of nostalgic details and present technology can be very pleasing and profitable.

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

A new kid on the block as well as a new product that defines luxury in the pet product field is Susan Hotz's Doggie Décor. A pet owner who spends every summer in Amagansett, she had an elegant idea that went all the way within one year, including her patent application to the world of pets. She is launching in the Hamptons, Amagansett and Sag Harbor this week.

Doggie Décor's "Crate Duvet" is a newcomer to pet products that was born out of the designer's issue with the wire dog crate sitting in the middle of your new beautifully decorated kitchen, great room or bedroom. "A visual distraction," explained Ms. Hotz. Next came a tailored design, beautiful decorator fabrics, tassels and many other embellishments that allow you to transform your dog crate into a decorative accessory. Designs include a Tuscan print, Jungle theme, Mandarin Toile, all in different shades, woven neutrals and a whimsical bright blue and yellow design. The Crate Duvet provides your pet with the den-like atmosphere and comfort they instinctively need and the style you can be proud of. The duvet retails from $99 to $120, depending on style and fabric. A small price to pay for a luxury designer product that will change your room from the kennel look to a designer showcase.

The product line will make its premier and is available right now at Devonshire Garden Shop, Main Street, Bridgehampton, Harbor Pets, West Water Street in Sag Harbor at the One Stop Pet Shop on Main Street in Amagansett and at Little Lulu's at 91 Jobs

Lane in Southampton.

Doggie Décor can be reached at:
www.doggiedecor.com or by phone at 888-Dog-Crate at any time.

Another new art gallery opened last week, at 9 Windmill Lane in Southampton. Fondrisi Gallery shows a phenomenal line up of celebrity artists, and artists of celebrity.

On exhibit will be "The Art of a Playboy Playmate," by Victoria Fuller. She is the first fine artist to be granted the right to depict the Playboy image, logo and name in original and limited edition artwork.

Also on exhibit will be the works of Ronnie Wood of The Rolling Stones. Before his musical career he received formal art training at Ealing College of Art in London. Throughout the years, he has worked as both the artist and the musician and his artwork has been widely exhibited in one-man shows in North and South America, the Far East and throughout Europe.

Stephen Holland's work is also on exhibit at the gallery. As a young painter, images he found in boxing magazines became his subjects. Holland's talent and contributions to art and sports received national recognition in 1993. His work is found in the collections of celebrities, athletes and private collectors around the globe.

Amagansett resident Phyllis Skolnick Hirschberg's paintings depict life and scenery, from the East End to the streets of New York City and beyond. Phyllis paints using strong lines and vibrant color with a sense of whimsy. In 1977 she had a one-woman show at Guild Hall, and was named Best In Show in 1976.

Marco has painted murals on numerous walls from New York City to the Hamptons. In 1998 he designed and launched the best selling "Alien Baby" Swatch Watch and painted murals in over 50 Swatch Watch retail stores all around the globe. Marco is also an official artist for the 2004 US Olympic Team.

You can reach the Fondrisi Gallery by calling 631-204-0025 or simply log onto their website at www.Fondrisigallery.com

Jamu officially re-opened as the Seaflower Spa this month. Sitting pretty at 10 Main Street in East Hampton, there are several amazing updates to the location that you should be aware of.

Among the many services available are facials (deep cleansing and gentle), with Jurlique, the all organic skin care line from Australia that counts Nicole Kidman and Michelle Pfeiffer as its biggest fans. Jurlique Signature facials are one of their most asked-for services. Men's Facials are also available here as well as an anti-aging/anti-acne sugar peel that leaves skin glowing and rejuvenated. The Tone and Detox is a leg and tushie treatment that your bikini will thank you for. The spa is presenting Lomi-Lomi, which is a traditional Hawaiian massage based on soothing, fluid strokes working gently into the muscles. Two therapists perform this massage. Maternity massages are designed for the special needs of the mom-to-be. Prices for treatments range from $85 to $425, depending on what services you choose. A yoga studio features the top yogis in the world as instructors, and includes a new Thai Yoga massage room. There is also a beautiful boutique that features clothing, jewelry and more.

Open everyday except Tuesday, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Call the Seaflower Spa at 324-6996 for information and appointments.

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

Polo opened this past weekend, Boys and Girls Harbor blasted away on Saturday evening, the Hamptons is in full swing. It's time to get shopping though, so let's do it!

Are you all ready for the fifth annual Rock 'n Roll Show at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center? The show benefits the Special Olympics, Long Island and is scheduled for Thursday, July 29, at 7 p.m. with The Duprees and Lou Christie. Tickets are on sale now at the box office, 631-653-5570. A special thanks to Rocco Oliverio and the many sponsors for making this fun event happen every year!

The wrong date for Super Saturday was printed in my column last issue. I am sorry for the error...The correct date is Saturday, July 31. This year, the seventh annual Super Saturday hosted by Donna Karan, Kelly Ripa and In Style's Charla Lawhon, will be held at Nova's Ark Project in Water Mill from 12 noon to 6 p.m. on Saturday, July 31. The shopping extravaganza will feature its much anticipated one-of-a-kind fashion garage sale with items from over 200 of the most prominent designers including Donna Karan, Calvin Klein, Ralph Lauren, Emanuel Ungaro, Marc Jacobs Handbags, Kate Spade, Brooks Brothers, Chloe, Delman, John Varvatos, Hollywood, Lulu Guinness, Catherine Malandrino, Shoshanna, Sigerson Morrison, Valentino, Elie Tahari, Perry Ellis, Lacoste and so many more. There will be special activities for kids that will feature tents by Old Navy, Barbie, Cozy's Cuts for Kids, and Toys "R" Us. Adults can also enter the Dyson Vacuum challenge, have their nails touched up at the Essie Manicure booth, and have their pictures taken at the In Style photo booth. For complete information on ticket prices call 917-351-8694. See you there!

Norah's, located at 46 Jobs Lane in Southampton, is hosting a private sale on Friday, July 30, from 7 to 10 p.m. with Rock & Republic denim collection. The sale event is to support the Ovarian Cancer Research Fund and Rock & Republic will be donating 15% of the proceeds for the cause. Get yourself ready for those special parties at this special evening of shopping.

If you thought you've seen it all in discounts, stop in at Dansk on Main Street in Southampton for their semi-annual inventory blowout sale for storewide savings. You can save an extra 15% to 50% off with the mystery discount that will be revealed by your sales associate. This sale will run only until July 25, so get going!

The "Patio Sale" at Hildreth's Department Store on Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton is a good one. You can save 50% with additional extra 10% bonuses. Now is the time to add that extra table with umbrella and chairs on the other side of the patio and save yourself some dollars.

Patio.com's million dollar final clearance "Sidewalk Sale" is up and running and will turn your backyard into a little private paradise. You will save up to 70% off on this sale, so maybe you should buy two!

Sleepy's is doing that 50% off department store prices sale with an additional 20% off on their major brand mattress sets. Stop in and check out the inventory here; they have sixteen major brands to choose from.

D.J. Hart, sitting pretty on Main Street in Sag Harbor, has it all going on. They have just received their new summer arrivals, which include pashmina shawls for the cool August nights, ponchos, sarongs and sundresses. Don't pass up the handmade, one of a kind jewelry made exclusively by Dee, and Crabtree and Evelyn bath and body products for that last minute gift.

It's Dan's Papers annual Kite Fly time, so get prepared for the best one ever! Mark your calendar for Sunday, August 1, from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. at Sagg Main Beach in Sagaponack. There are twenty four categories and lots of great prizes so bring your own hand made kite or pick one up and fly it with Dan and the staff of Dan's Papers. For starters, stop in at Kites of the Harbor on Main Street in Sag Harbor and pick your favorite prize winning kite. My family never misses this event. See you there!

And... If you are attending the Blue Moon Ball, a benefit for EECO Farm on Saturday, July 31 at the home of Vicki and Stuart Match Suna, make sure you're prepared for their extraordinary live auction. Would you like a dinner for six prepared in your home by one of Donna Karan's private chefs, Susan Lish? Tiffany & Co. Atlas stainless steel his and her watches? A day sailing on the 42' Sun Ray for ten guests with dinner catered by Art of Eating? A family day for eight people with the Hamptons new camp BLUE RUSH, Xtreme Sports, including a clambake by the Seafood Shop? Or perhaps one of Amy Zerner's one-of-a-kind "Spiritual Couture" jackets which are featured in select Neiman Marcus stores and Bergdorf Goodman? For tickets and information call 329-5480.

Until next week. Ciao and happy summer shopping! Are you having a sale? E-mail me at shoptil@danspapers.com I would love to hear from you.

Alice In Wonderland At Guild Hall

The magic of dance, theater, and legendary storytelling unfold in the form of miniature marionettes this week at Guild Hall. National Marionette Theater arrives in East Hampton on Wednesday. Marionettes are lifelike puppets that move by the working of nearly invisible strings. The real people are above the marionettes, out of sight, creating beautiful scenes in which the puppets look realistic and alive. These perfectly painted people will wander through Wonderland onstage on July 28, as a part of Guild Hall's Kidfest series, which takes place every Wednesday at 5 p.m. through August 18.

Alice was just another little girl playing innocently with her cat under a canopy of trees. But when she followed a certain White Rabbit, she was transported into another world. A world of fantasy and insanity. A world of fun and adventure. A world where the unknown lurks around every corner.

Lewis Carroll's classic tale follows Alice and her most unhelpful "guardian angel," The Cheshire Cat, as she tries to find her way back to the quiet meadow she left behind. This little girl, who once thought her existence a bit dull, was now on a desperate search to reclaim what she lost. But she would not get out of Wonderland without meeting some interesting, frightening, and inspiring characters along the way. Remember Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum prancing around together in the woods? Remember the Caterpillar blowing smoke rings through his long pipe while lounging across a leaf? Remember the flowers gossiping as Alice wandered dazedly beneath their blossoms?

Wonderland is a place of contradictions, where left means right, up means down, and the day to celebrate your birthday is every day of the year except the day you were actually born. Alice's quest is to attempt to sort out how she wound up in such an upside down place with the help of the mysterious Cheshire Cat, whose smile glows like the upturned crescent moon.

"But I don't want to go among mad people," Alice remarked.

"Oh, you can't help that," said the Cat. "We're all mad here. I'm mad. You're mad."

"How do you know I'm mad?" asked Alice.

"You must be," said the Cat, "or you wouldn't have come here."

The Queen of Hearts is on a mission to keep Alice from returning home with her head on her body, and Alice finds herself racing through wild scenes of life-size chess pieces and red and white rose gardens in attempt to avoid being beheaded.

It's such a beautiful tale of adventure, with treasured songs like How do You Do And Shake Hands, I'm Late, and Painting the Roses Red. And it's coming to us, not with live actors, but with lifelike marionettes dancing and singing their ways into our hearts.

The National Marionette Theatre has been performing for over 40 years. The company tours worldwide for productions geared towards adults as well as children. They have won national and international awards for excellence in the field of puppetry.

David Syrotiak, the company's Artistic Director, explains that puppetry is "a synthesis of the arts: Sculpture, design, music, mime, dance and theatre...it is the crystallization of the imagination and magic of the puppeteer."

The National Marionette Theatre is committed to the integrity of Lewis Carroll's beloved book, Alice in Wonderland. In an attempt to be true to its meaning, the characters have been crafted after the original book illustrations by John Tenniel. The production is complete with a full-stage set that changes right in front of the audience's excited eyes.

Join this unique day of Kidfest this Wednesday,

July 28 at 5 p.m. at Guild Hall. Tickets are $8 for kids and $12 for adults, or $6 for kid members of Guild Hall, and $10 for adult members. Or get a discount by purchasing the whole Kidfest series, which will take place every Wednesday throughout the summer with more exciting performances: $80 for adults or $48 for kids. To order tickets or for more information, call the box office at 324-4050.

Clippity Clop with Ali Spencer

Last Saturday morning I joined the hoards of people attending the first polo match of a series that will last the rest of the summer. Once again, the Bridgehampton Polo Club plays host to the Mercedes-Benz Challenge.

Upon our arrival, we were accompanied down the driveway by trotting teams of polo ponies. A man was mounted on one horse and leading about eight others on ropes. It reminded me of the dog walkers in Manhattan who have 17 dogs attached to one belt loop.

The tent was outfitted with boxy, rectangular benches and square white tables. It looked stylish, like the inside of a trendy Manhattan nightclub.

Speaking of trendy, the program/magazine for Bridgehampton Polo has more pages dedicated to photos of spectators (12) than pages dedicated to the game of polo (7), not to mention the 25-page "Dining, Lounging and Club-Hopping" section.

A motorcade of three Mercedes convertibles (this being the Mercedes-Benz Polo Challenge) started off the event by touring the perimeter of the field. Sitting in the back of the first two cars were models, waving like Miss America or Queen Elizabeth. In the back of the third car was Jessica Alba (star of the Fox drama Dark Angel), the host of the afternoon. She looked much more at ease and didn't have a silly wave.

The general public is seated on the west side of the field. There are small grandstands from which to view the match, but most people had their cars parked along the sidelines and were enjoying picnics. The people who brought the RV seemed to have the right idea.

Just before the match started, Bridgehampton Polo turned into a Knicks Game at Madison Square Garden. The players lined up their horses. Loud, thumping music started playing over the loud speakers. The announcer yelled, "Let's get ready to rummmmmble!" Then, as he read the list of players' names, each one cantered forward out of the line.

If you spot an empty row of seats right at mid-field and wonder why no one is sitting in them, it's probably because the loudspeaker is right there.

The polo field is absolutely huge (the area of nine football fields), perfectly flat and beautifully manicured. There are ten horses on the field during play. Each team has four horses and there are two umpires. After seeing the field in person, it is no wonder that a player must change horses so often during the game.

Polo players have no fear. They have to be crazy to play this sport. Either they are flat out galloping at 20 miles an hour, leaning off the side of the horse and swinging at a small, round object or they are in the middle of a herd of horses, mallets swinging in all directions, including at their heads. But it still looks really fun.

The action under the tent is as much a part of the event as the action on the field. The routine seems to be: watch some polo, take a tour of the tent, watch some more polo, get another drink, then be shocked that it's already the fifth chukker. Spectators drank little, individual sized bottles of champagne, which came with gold straws.

The stomping of the divots is quite fun, but I felt that more divots were probably being made by all of the high heels than were being turned over.

No matter how excited you are to be in the V.I.P. tent, there is always a Very-V.I.P. (V.V.I.P.) tent that you are not allowed into.

The teams playing last weekend were White Birch and Black Watch. White Birch won 12-10. The MVP was Mariano Aguerre, a 10-goal player. 10-goal is the best handicap rating a polo player can have. There are only a handful of ten goal players in the world.

The season will continue for six consecutive Saturdays, ending August 21st. The Bridgehampton Polo Club is open to the public, and tickets to The Mercedes-Benz Polo Challenge are available on a first come, first serve basis for the 400 General Admission tickets available each week. The general admission fee is $20 per car, and proceeds go to the South Fork Breast Health Coalition. Matches take place from 4-6 p.m. The Bridgehampton Polo Club is located at 849 Hayground Road, Bridgehampton. Log onto www.bhpolo.com for more information.

Let's Go Fly a Kite: Dan's 32nd Annual Kite Fly

My tiny six-year old self was swept up in a whirlwind of activity and excitement as I slowly made my way down Sagg Main Beach. I watched, wide-eyed, as parents, teenagers, and toddlers alike all prepared their various, multi-colored kites for lift-off. For the past week, my mother and I had worked avidly on preparing my homemade "Hello Kitty" kite for its maiden voyage at the Dan's Papers Annual Kite Fly. Like the dozens of other parents and children that make the trip to the beach every year, I felt my life's work would be complete if my handcrafted kite won one of many prizes offered. Would my week's worth of cutting, painting, and pasting together my kite be in vain or would I win the coveted $50 certificate to KB toys? As I watched one of my many opponents – a little girl with long blonde braids – carefully unravel her high-tech, store-bought dragon kite next to me, I knew I would soon find out.

It is these memories of my first annual Kite Fly that have kept me coming back to the family event for years afterward. Many may believe that these competitions are only meant to point out the good kite from the bad, the talented from the inept, the strong from the weak. And if truth be told, I used to be one of these nonbelievers who scoffed at kite flies, and community events such as this one. Yet, when my mother decided we should make a kite of our own and compete, I reluctantly agreed. After all, what respectable first grader would give up the opportunity to win a shopping spree at KB toys? I sure wouldn't.

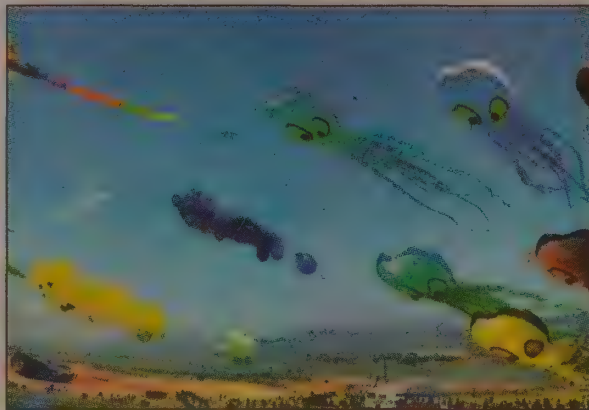

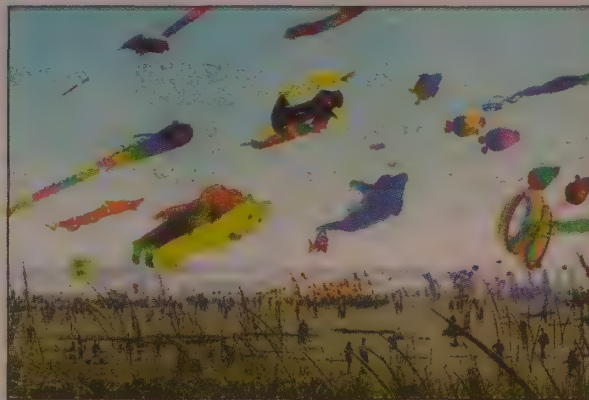

Despite my uncertainties about the event, I soon forgot my qualms (as most young children tend to do) and ended up working my little heart out. And to my surprise, I enjoyed the project not only because I was proud of the result (which I must say, was pretty exceptional), but also because I genuinely enjoyed working beside my mother. For the week leading up to the event, we sat at our newspaper-covered coffee table as two equals and pasted, glued and giggled our way to our final home-made product: that beautiful Hello Kitty kite.

So when it came time for me to carefully prepare my kite for its own take-off that breezy day at the beach, it wasn't the actual kite I was proud of, but my mother, and our ability to create such an original kite together. After taking a deep, shuddering breath, I released the kite and watched as it caught a particularly large breath of wind. Slowly it rose into the sky, a butterfly in the shape of Hello Kitty. I suddenly felt remarkably like the little girl in Mary Poppins, surrounded by friends and family, completely at peace with the world while flying her beautiful kite. No longer did it matter that I later won a prize in the "best homemade kite" category, for I made some unforgettable memories that day, and in the end, that's all that truly matters. So come and make some memories of your own at this year's 32nd Annual Kite Fly, Saturday August 1st. I know I will be there.

Illuminations by Barbara Jo Howard

Yoga Submerged

I was late for yoga. I pulled into Gurney's, jammed my car into a parking space, and made a fast dash toward the spa. In front of me, a young girl was running in the same direction. I tried to keep up with her, but she sprinted ahead wearing a pale pink sweat suit. Pink? "Only a teen could get away with wearing that," I sneered and thereby excused myself for being outdistanced.

Just then, the girl's hood fell back - revealing a long, thick, silver braid that danced down the middle of her back. The next time I saw her was a few minutes later as she serenely walked into the studio to lead the class.

Nesya Tibbets, a doyenne of fitness, is 70 years old. And, her body and personality boldly defy it.

She is a person for whom yoga and exercise have provided both solace and a means to raise her family. They have also given her youth.

"I started as a gymnast," she told me following a 90-minute Aquacise, Aqua Jog, and Yoqua sampling workout.

Born and raised in San Diego, she married at 20 and for the next 20 years moved throughout the Northern hemisphere with her husband, a Naval officer, and their four daughters. But, whether in Kodiak, Alaska, Meridian, Mississippi, or Puerto Rico, Nesya always taught the benefits of exercise to the other women on the base. In Alaska, her teaching earned her a letter of appreciation from the Admiral, who was a fitness advocate. Today, her teaching earns her the appreciation of women and men who daily take one of the many classes she leads at Gurney's Inn Resort & Spa Conference Center in Montauk.

This past Sunday, I plunged into the saltwater indoor pool and joined a sampling class of Aqua exercises and water yoga. These water routines provide a safe and therapeutic alternative to floor programs. They are particularly good for those nursing sore or fatigued muscles and joints, or those just beginning an exercise program. The beauty of the latter is that all the work goes on under water...so there is no sneaking a peek as to who is better than whom. It truly allows you to work at your own pace. The beauty of the former is no impact. You get a total workout without stressing joints.

"After World War II, the reflecting fountain in our park was converted into a therapy pool for soldiers," Nesya mused. "Isn't it odd how, over a half-century later, we are recognizing the healing benefits of water?"

Aquacise and Aqua Jog use colorful paddles and dumbbells to create water resistance. A foam belt provides buoyancy and stability that allows one to jog underwater, while working the arms, shoulders, upper back and core. The routines are followed by Yoqua stretches. The poses are similar to those yoga postures done on land, but feel even more tranquil in the water.

Nesya's introduction to Yoga was in the late 60s through an adult education course in San Diego. She then studied with Erhard Vogel, the renowned teacher of self realization, and frequented his Nataraja Ashram to become a certified yoga instructor.

In the early 1970s, Nesya and her husband divorced. Needing a job, she parlayed her teaching and was named as fitness director for Fitness Resorts, Inc., owners of The Golden Door as well as Rancho La Puerto in Tecate, Mexico where she worked with guests, teaching everything from yoga to hiking.

In 1980, through a friend and mentor, Nesya learned about a new spa and resort that was opening on Long Island. She took the position of fitness director on a trial basis, expecting to be at Gurney's for no more than a year. She has been here ever since, and continues to provide healthful instruction for those seeking well-being. Over that time, she has introduced new programs and classes including toning, hatha yoga, dance (including ballet barre) and aerobics. She received certification from the Cooper Aerobics Center in Dallas.

Her water classes are cardiovascular and muscle-building workouts with no impact. The Yoqua routines maximize hydrostatic pressure, allowing for more resistance and thereby working circulation around the joints to improve flexibility.

She has a devoted following that represents all levels of fitness. Many come every day, and they confided that Nesya always varies the exercise and challenge, so the workout is never boring. She teaches on land, standing by the side of the pool, demonstrating every position so students can see. From my perspective, I hope my body is half as fit when I am 70 years young.

The Solitary Celebration That Is Fishing

The man woke earlier, but did not rise from bed until 3:45 a.m. It was a Saturday morning in Hampton Bays, one that would keep a promise of clear skies, sunshine, and a minor gust of wind. After a light kiss on his wife's forehead, he welcomed the morning with a warm cup of coffee, some slices of buttered toast, and a bowl of fresh blueberries. By the time the bedside clock struck 4:02 a.m., he was out the door and driving his station wagon with a 12-foot long, two-seated, wooden boat on top. At quick stop to Altenkirch's near the Shinnecock Canal, he bought some live bait (clams, eels, herring etc.). The glowing green numbers read 4:18 a.m. on his dashboard clock just before he parked his car, removed his boat from the roof, and carried it to the shoreline.

There are different types of fishermen. There are the commercial ones, who are out at sea, days at a time, catching squid, tuna, and just about anything else. They pack themselves into tight quarters and will brave the elements at 2:30 a.m. when the 15-foot waves are crashing against the stern, dousing everything with water, and, at any moment, your feet could get knocked from underneath you as you tumble overboard.

This man is not a commercial fisherman, but he is what they call a "weekend warrior." After a long week of hard work at the office, the weekend comes, and it is time to escape – and there is no escape like the sea.

His armor consists of your less formal, more comfortable and durable clothes. The five-year-old pair of jeans, styled like cargo pants, have plentiful pockets for him to place pertinent accessories. The long sleeve t-shirt displays the white outline of a college insignia, faded by years of the same washing detergent. The beige hat has a brim wide and long enough to shade most of his face from the soon-to-be searing sun. His weapon is a six-foot long wooden fishing rod, and its ammunition of hooks is stowed safely in the dulled silver tackle box. There is rust around the hinges near the handle, and it squeaks when grasped.

Great catch

Aboard his vessel, the weekend warrior ventures into the waters. As he makes his way through the inlet, and near the Ponquogue bridge, the aura of the hour is still a little on the blue side. This is the best time for him to be fishing for striped bass. This particular fish avoids the light, so with sunrise taking place shortly after 5:30 a.m., he can still get in a solid hour of reeling in some catches. On top of that, there are no jet skis or extra motors creating any wake near his boat. The only noises are the faint lapping of waves. The light wind is perfect, creating a tide neither tumultuous nor tame. Occasionally, the caws of gulls are audible over the wind and above his head. But he isn't paying attention to them.

He pays attention to the drifting line that pierces the dark waters. His hands grasp the 10-weight rod. It will take consistent patience and eventual focus to catch a striped bass this morning. The sky grows red with some tinges of orange and yellow. Time passes. By 7:23 a.m., he is already making his way back to shore. He considers himself accomplished, or perhaps just a little lucky, as he putters along with a nine-pound "striper" in his boat.

On his way home, he stops by Altenkirch once again. This time he stops by to pick up a new filet knife, and a scaler. The weekend warrior has been fishing for over 40 years, giving plenty of time and experience to gut and scale the fish. By the time his family awakens, a home-caught, home-cooked breakfast of fish was awaiting them.

The next day, overcast skies and the occasional showers replace the previous day's glorious conditions. For the novice fisherman, it is a terrible day to traverse the waters. For the weekend warrior, it is a rare opportunity. With the cloudy skies blocking out most of the sun, the man does not have to wake too early, nor wait too late for that matter, for some ripe bass fishing. The rain pours down and trickles off his beige hat, and the man sits back. It is a little lighter, and there are just as few boats and wakes as the previous morning. Before he heads out today, his daughter-in-law asks if he is concerned about the weather. With the slight crack of a smile, the weekend warrior emits a light chuckle. "The fish are going to be wet anyway," he says. "I don't anticipate any problems."

Capoeira: From Slavery To Freedom

Capoeira is a strong braid of three key life forces: art, defense, and identity. It is a Brazilian martial art that is also a beautiful, sensual dance. It has been around for hundreds of years. The earliest historical record of capoeira was in 1770, but it probably originated even earlier.

More than 2 million slaves were brought to Brazil during the slave trade. Many who were thrown together on plantations were from enemy tribes in Africa, but to the white masters they all represented the same thing: free labor. Eventually, the slaves realized that there would be no peaceful end to this forced servitude, and many people put their old battles behind them to unite against the new enemy. They needed an escape.

One of the main ports of slave distribution in Brazil was Recife. In the mid-18th century, a group of 40 slaves rebelled against their master and killed all the white people on the property before burning it to the ground. They fled, beginning a long journey for refuge. Eventually, they settled in Palmares, where an African community began. This was the birthplace of capoeira.

Palmares eventually reached a population of 20,000 escaped slaves, along with some Indians and whites. Because of this cultural fusion, not to mention the myriad African tribes represented, capoeira adopted aspects from many origins. Influences of various tribal dances, rituals, and religions combined to create capoeira.

Expeditions sent by the Portuguese and the new arrivals, the Dutch, sought to conquer Palmares, but the tactics of ambush coupled with capoeira usually prevailed over insurgents. When, however, an expedition did occasionally succeed in re-enslaving the people of Palmares, capoeira took on a new life. At the plantations, those who had seen Palmares would spread the teachings of capoeira to the other slaves. On the plantations, though, the deadly martial art had to be disguised. This is how capoeira adopted its artistic side. Sundays were the day of rest at the plantations, and that became the day for capoeira. The slaves would sing, and they would go through the movements very slowly, so that if a master came in, it looked like they were dancing.

In 25 years, the slaves successfully organized 11 rebellions and, in 1888, the government abolished slavery. But capoeira still had a long road ahead. After the abolition, there was little employment for freed slaves. Many turned to crime, now using their capoeira for less noble means. This led to a law stating that anyone who knew the art of capoeira would be expatriated.

But when Brazil went to war with Paraguay in the late 1800s, the black militia were in the front line of combat, and they became national heroes because of their supreme fighting skills. Still, capoeira was prohibited and had to be disguised as a dance. It wasn't until 1937, when Mestret Bimba, while they fight or dance. There are two players in the ring at a time. The movements in capoeira include kicks, headbutts, elbows, and knee thrusts.

The music and the action in capoeira are reflective. A slower tempo will stimulate more of a dance, almost a flirtatious interaction. As the pace of the music increases, so does the intensity of combat. The mestre is the singer and usually also the person playing the berimbau. He/she will improvise lyrics to describe the interaction, from the physical movements to the emotions of the players.

The first time I saw capoeira was right here in Amagansett at the free monthly "Music In The Square," which, in June, boasted Brazilian music and a Capoeira group. I sat cross-legged on the ground watching people of all levels, from young girls just beginning to grasp the art to Brazilian men who played off each other with power, control, and grace. It is an extremely sensual interaction, the way the limbs undulate to the sound of the music, and as the beat increases, so does the movement of the limber bodies. The performers were using the strength in all of their muscles to slowly turn themselves into handstand positions, to flip, and to fight. The tradition, so deep rooted, continues today.

—Emily J Weitz

Capoeira in action

a legendary capoeirista, was called to the president of Brazil to perform capoeira, that it became acceptable to society. The presentation was successful, and the first capoeira school was opened. Capoeira, for the first time, could emerge from the shadows.

Capoeira calls for a circle of onlookers, called a roda. At the top of the roda are the musicians. The instruments used in capoeira include the berimbau, a bowed instrument with a gourd at the bottom, whose rhythm dictates the pace of the capoeira players. Additionally, there is the atabaque, a floor drum, and the pandeiro, a Brazilian tambourine. The musicians typically also engage in the physical capoeira performance, leaving their instruments

Swim, Bike, Run – Triathlon

This past Sunday I attended the 9th Annual Montauk Point Lighthouse Sprint Triathlon & Relay presented by LIPA with generous support from Bridgehampton National Bank. All proceeds went to benefit the Montauk Point Lighthouse.

I'm not at all familiar with races of any kind with the exception of my participation in high school track (and I won't mention how many years ago that was), but I was excited to witness the entire process. The event was scheduled to kick off with a 1/2 mile swim at Gin Beach in Montauk. Unfortunately the thick fog conditions delayed the competition for a little over an hour. My friends and I waited and waited, until we heard the word from the Harbor Master and the organizers of the event that the swim portion was cancelled. The multitude of athletes looked like a defeated army as they walked back towards the bike transition station sporting their wetsuits. We decided it would be wise to head back towards the second transition station where they would be dropping off their bikes and changing into running shoes. So, off we went. The fog was still heavy as we drove back toward the Lighthouse.

And who would have predicted, fifteen minutes later, we heard they decided to go ahead with the swim after all. So we missed that part of it, but we were later front and center for the most important part...the finish.

I could not imagine what it takes to be athletically prepared to participate in a triathlon, but I was determined to find out. At approximately 9:28 a.m., Josh Marcus was the first to drop off his bike and bolt up the path for the 3.1 mile run. He was in the first heat and appeared to be way ahead of the rest by a several minutes. As each athlete passed, we cheered them on. I was amazed at the fast pace many were keeping. I tried to get a closer look and then realized that if I didn't want to miss the finish, I would have to move. I ran as fast as I could back towards the entrance of the Lighthouse where the finish line was located, at the top of the hill. My "little" run exhausted me.

The crowd grew more and more excited as 19 year-old Josh Marcus, #241 from Bayside, New York made his way towards the finish line after 1 hour and 4 seconds. He looked as though he could run another 3 miles, but luckily for him, the race was over. Now he would have to wait for the results of the next few heats to make certain his time was the best.

After the remaining heats finished, the results were in and Race Director Jose Lopez announced that Josh was the winner. I decided to let him catch his breath before chatting with him about how he stays in shape. Turns out that this was Josh's second win recently, and he was happy with his time. He told me that he rides his bike to and from work everyday (approximately 18 miles) to keep in shape. He also runs 6 miles or so several times per week. The group of guys I was chatting with were members of Team Runners Edge, which includes about 100 members in all.

Many of the triathletes belong to such groups or organizations. Training in a group helps to keep you focused on improving your goals as does cross-training. Matt Descovich, #99, told me he alternates on a daily basis between swimming, running and biking and that this is the best way to keep your strength in all areas of the triathlon.

Training together is also fun, as attested to by husband and wife team Julie and Josh Schiffman from NYC. They have been competing for years. Julie knew she found her soul mate when she met Josh and they were both passionate about triathlons and staying in shape. They enjoy training in Central Park and like to run almost everyday. "So many people from different backgrounds and occupations come together to join in this sport. It's a great equalizer," said Julie.

Steve Tarpinian and Chris Pfund, owner of the Montauk Bike Shop, organize a training camp every year for triathletes and they have participants from 8 to 80 years of age. Chris's 11-year-old son Brian ran the race, and just gets better and better.

The only thing I can determine is that Triathlons are not easy. In order to compete, you must be dedicated and determined to give it your all. It helps to have a high quality bike and top-of-the-line running shoes. But mainly, to be a triathlete at the high-level with a chance to finish at the top, you need hours of working out and dedication and determination to succeed. In my opinion, anyone who completes a triathlon, whether they come in first or last, deserves a round of applause.

Biking: Next Stop Montauk

I woke up late. In and of itself, this is not unusual. My girlfriend jumped out of bed at 6 a.m. Now that was unusual. She tried shaking me awake, because I had overslept by at least an hour. We are not ordinarily early risers, and that day was an especially dreary day – one designed for sleeping until at least noon and listening to Smith's records. Still, she had plans to meet her mother and drive to Montauk to watch a friend running in the triathlon at the Lighthouse, which started at 7 a.m. My plan, ambitious and misdirected as it may have been, was to bike from my house in Sag Harbor and meet them there. Their plan was to drive in the comfort of their Jeep. A horn honked, Sophie tucked the cover around me and bolted outside.

There were any number of reasons why I felt I still had to get my stuff together and start biking, even though it was late and it was raining. I said I would. I was turning 30 in three days. I felt out of shape.

A cold, slate grey morning greeted me when I walked outside on my deck in bare feet. Thick haze rolled in from the bay, and a light drizzle fell. I went back inside and was seized by a sense of deliberate speed anyway. I dressed quickly in inappropriate gear – a cotton t-shirt, board shorts and running sneakers.

My eye had been bothering me the previous night. I pulled my eyelid down and looked it over in the bathroom mirror. It was bright red with veins visible. I knew contacts would be a struggle, but without them I might as well pedal with my eyes closed. As soon as the lens hit my eye it stung like needles and sand. But I gritted through it, pounded my heel on the floor, blinked, and put some drops in my eye to provide lubrication. The stinging persisted. Feeling a bit like the cyborg in Terminator, I pulled on a pair of wraparound sunglasses, concealing my bright red eye, and headed outside.

The tires on my mountain bike felt slightly mushy after not having been used for two months. After inflating them and doing only the most precursory stretching, I hopped on my bike and started down on the mechanics of what I was doing. I shifted gears according to the gradient, although the roads here are mostly flat. Experienced cyclists adjust their cadence – how fast they pedal – based on how much force they can exert for the gradient and the gear and how fast they need to go to keep their pace. A schmuck like me, who just sits on the seat and starts pedaling, doesn't stand a chance. All things considered, though, I wasn't feeling bad, and cruised right through East Hampton where everyone was still asleep, I think. I stopped in Amagansett to get water at the deli on Main Street, the first thing I'd seen open, and readied myself for the Napeague Stretch.

Cars and trucks hurtled out of the fog on the Stretch and roared by me. I couldn't see the headlights until they were within 30 or 40 yards of me, a condition not helped by the constant drizzle and mist combining with the fog to form a soup and causing me to wipe the water from my sunglasses every few minutes. The road in these conditions resembled nothing so much as a long, grey tunnel.

When I got close to Montauk I must have been getting a second or third wind, because at the split I opted to take the longer route and rolling hills of Old Montauk Highway along the ocean instead of the more direct Route 27. I think I actually got another burst of energy on those small hills, some of the only ones on the entire ride. Montauk Village – no problem. After that, I noticed I was actually on the triathlon course. Horrible visions of getting caught in a swarm of driven cyclists or worse, runners competing for top spots with me in the way and ruining the finish, flashed through my head. But I got to the Lighthouse without incident, only to learn that the triathlon, delayed due to fog and rain, hadn't even started yet. I hobbled to the starting line to watch the real athletes.

Noyac Road. Without fail, whenever I begin any journey, no matter how insignificant or important, something vital will be forgotten. In this case I realized relatively early – on Brick Kiln Road – that I had forgotten my wallet, which seemed important in this case because it had my license and insurance card in it for the purposes of identification and medical care. I rode the half-mile or so back to house, grabbed my wallet and got back on my bike.

By the time I got to Route 114, I already questioned the wisdom of the trip. I tried to concentrate

What Are They Doing Out There?

Heading East on Rt. 27, I drive through Amagansett with the famous Stephen Talkhouse on my left. I pass the farmers' market and the firehouse and I come to the end of something. It feels like the end of something. As if I am about to exit one state of mind and enter another. And sure enough, after that last Irish Deli and the little flower cart, there is a steep hill down. The car plunges like a luge into the Napeague Stretch – a long, pencil thin mustache of a land mass, like a roofless tunnel, jutting northeast into the Atlantic.

In a five mile span, the Napeague Stretch hosts two state parks: Napeague and Hither Hills. As I drive at top speed and let the wind rip through the car, I watch jungles fly past on the left and ancient dunes on the right. Forests so green the trees look like giant bushes – the vines weaving in and out of each other in a tangled knot. The dunes rise in the distance like hulking monsters protecting the coast. The highway is an injection through the land, just below the level of the sides.

Past the timeless Lobster Roll spot Lunch. Past the Promised Land (so named because of all the fish that used to be caught and stored there that it stunk to the high heavens). And then I see them rising in the distance: beautifully colored, billowing sails a hundred feet in the air. Huge kites. I make a left onto Napeague Harbor Road and stop at the train tracks. I look to the left – rusty tracks in a dead straight line as far as the eye can see. I look to the right. It does not look like a train has traveled these tracks in a hundred years. But sure as death and taxes, the LIRR goes east and west twice a day. I drive over the tracks and down a half-dirt road to a dead end.

I get out of the car and walk to the edge of the Harbor. I look to a blue kite and follow the invisible line down to its source. A surfer. A kite surfer. I believe the best way against it. There are anywhere from two to twenty of these out in Napeague Harbor on any given day. And it is a beautiful thing to behold. I cannot think of a more natural sport that harnesses both the wind and the water in such a harmonious way.

I speak to one of the mainstays of the Napeague Harbor kiting people. "It's not easy. But once you understand how to use the kite, it's a lot of fun." I watch a rider get speed going left with the kite low to the water, pull back on the reins to power up his kite, and launch himself fifty feet in the air, out of the water, and then float down, down with the kite acting as a parachute, only to land perfectly on the surface and ride again in the other direction.

I ask why Napeague Harbor is such a popular destination for this sport. There are two reasons: 1. The water is about three feet deep throughout the entire harbor making it easier to launch and recover from a fall. 2. Because of the geography of the land in this skinniest of spots on Long Island, it is a natural wind tunnel. The rising walking dunes to the east and thick forest to the west open to the north into Gardiner's Bay and to the south directly onto the Atlantic Ocean. Wind funnels through Napeague Harbor. It would be a horrible place to have a paper plate picnic. Although it would make for a hilarious to describe it is windsurfing with your sail out in the cosmos. Instead of holding your sail right against your body, you harness the wind in the upper currents and juxtapose your body and the edge of your board comedy of errors while say, meeting the in-laws.

I head back west to civilization with my music loud and my pedal to the metal. My mind wanders and time seems to stand still and I find that my favorite song begins to fade just as I ascend the road at the end of the Stretch. I feel like I have left something in Napeague and brought something back with me. No one can say they really experienced the Hamptons without a trip to the Napeague Stretch.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Surviving August's Dog Days

In many East End gardens, what was colorful and lush in June/July begins to look anemic, leggy, and brown by early August. The dog days of summer are approaching and these are hard times for gardens. Temperatures begin to soar and, though this has been a relatively wet year, rain will soon be scarce. Many lawns will brown out and many more will be overrun with crabgrass. Flower beds will begin to look spent and unruly, and start to attract opportunistic pests, beasts, and weeds.

This is a time of understandable concern: just when most of us want our garden investments to shine, they have a downturn! The thought of spending more time, money, and energy to replace spent plants, turf, and shrubs is not reasonable, especially since planting now may not provide adequate time for plants to "take." There are some tips that can help bring a garden through this tough time, and guarantee a beautiful display through Fall.

July is an excellent time for pruning and cutting back perennials and annuals that have become overgrown. Deadheading and pruning perennials restores plant compactness and may lead to re-blooming later in August. Trimming impatiens, petunias, and other annuals will provide renewed vigor and beauty. Mowing lawns about a half-inch higher than in June/July will provide adequate green for strong root growth, and shading that retains moisture.

There are mixed opinions about watering in mid-to-late-summer. Too many gardens suffer from "over care," e.g., too little water too frequently. It is best to water deeply, but infrequently, and only when plants beg for moisture. Watering properly is critical to plant health and garden survival during late July and August.

Automatic watering systems simplify gardening, but are mostly used improperly. Many gardeners program these systems for every day or every other day. This approach promotes unnecessary growth and fosters disease. It also results in shallow-rooted plants and lawn turf.

The best approach to watering is to do it deeply once or twice a week. A good rule of thumb is to provide the equivalent of about one inch to one-and-a-half inches of rainfall each week. During rainy periods like the ones we have had in July, turn irrigation systems off. Water only when plants show signs of wilting. Deep soaking of gardens encourages deep root growth and makes the garden more resilient to heat and drought.

It is best to water early in the morning; the worst time is in the evening. We typically start irrigation about 5:30 a.m. and end by 8 a.m. This gives the garden an opportunity to dry before nightfall when slugs, fungi, and other harmful critters are most active.

At this time of year, we hold off on fertilizers. Fertilizers promote growth and this means additional pruning, watering, and mowing in August. Start fertilizing again in September using an organic fertilizer high in potassium to encourage root development and prepare the garden for winter.

One exception is for container plants that benefit from an added boost mid-July.

We use what we call "flop tonic." Add four cups of dehydrated cow manure to a two-gallon bucket. Add in a handful of lime, a few handfuls of grass clippings, and about two tablespoons of a fish emulsion fertilizer. Fill the bucket with water, and mix well. Cover the bucket so mosquitoes and other insects cannot get in, and let the mixture steep for a week. Stir well before using and place some of the resulting slew around container plants. Replenish water and continue as needed.

As part of the summer garden program, remember that grass clippings contain valuable nutrients that can support a garden's fertilizing requirements. Research suggests that a hundred pounds of decomposed grass clippings recycles as much as four pounds of nitrogen, a half pound of phosphorus, and three pounds of potassium back to the garden. While clippings may not provide the best garden aesthetic, a light coating of clippings on lawns and some worked into garden beds is highly beneficial and worthwhile.

With some careful observation, prudent snipping, and conservative watering, gardens can survive August's dog days stunningly! Being diligent, but relaxing the control we East Hamptonites are so good at, is a worthwhile endeavor at this time of year.

Summer Antiques Show in Southampton Has New Sponsor and Location

Long Island's most anticipated and highly regarded antiques show will be experiencing some exciting new developments for its 15th season. The Summer Antiques Show is sponsored by the Southampton Historical Museum and will be held in the recreation center of the Southampton Intermediate School, 70 Leland Lane, in the delightful, historic village.

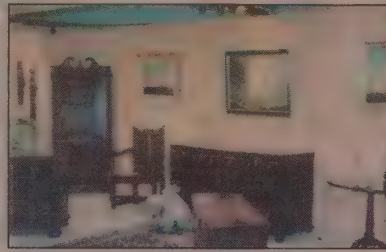

Opening with a Preview Gala on Friday evening, July 30, from 6 until 9 p.m., the show will continue throughout the weekend with general admission hours both days.

"The Best Antiques Show in the Hamptons" will highlight some of the more prominent exhibitors in the United States. In dramatic room settings, the international exhibitors will offer for sale the finest in American, European and Asian antiques, fine art, decorative accessories, period furniture, estate jewelry, rugs, textiles, porcelains, silver and so much more.

The hot new title this summer in the Hamptons is The Lost Hamptons. Authored by Californian Steven Petrow with Southampton's Richard Barons, this full-color survey of the East Coast's Riviera is an absolute delight.

Illustrated with over 100 images from turn-of-the-century postcards, this book covers mansions, resort life, the coming of the train, the ancient historic sites, and the colony's fabulous private clubs. Many of these rare postcards have not been published since they were first issued in the late 1800s. A major selection of these cards were collected by local architect Eric Woodward, who has well over 1,800 cards representing the East End. As a unique event for the Preview Gala, all three men involved with The Lost Hamptons will be on hand to autograph their book and answer any questions. Original cards not included in the book will be exhibited throughout the weekend at the antiques show so that people can enjoy more of these charming hand-colored views of a time now lost to history. In addition, the Gala will feature fine hors d'oeuvres and summer drinks from The Elegant Touch, early buying privileges and re-admission to the show all weekend. Tickets for this event are $30 at the door or $25 in advance. For advance reservations, call 283-2494.

Additionally, the 15th annual Summer Antiques Show will prove once again why it has received so many accolades. Peter Nee Antiques of Millwood, VA will show English and Continental antiques and fine art with an offering of some spectacular Staffordshire pieces. Perennial favorite with Hamptonites, Joan Grober of New York City will bring elegant antique jewelry, including diamond necklaces from the 1850s and 1860s, for her fifteenth year with the show. Another longtime exhibitor, Zane Moss Antiques, Ltd. of NYC, will show fine English furnishings for the home, exquisite Staffordshire figurines and fine art, with a special emphasis on animals.

There will be antique maps of New England and the Northeast, provided by Boston Rare Maps, while newcomers Plenty and Grace from Greene, ME will have comfortable country American antiques for the home and garden, with an emphasis on style and substance. Rugs of Distinction, NYC, will show fine Oriental and Persian carpets this year, and Greenwich Oriental Antiques of CT will display fine antique Chinese furniture, Asian paintings, textiles and works of art. Everything from the crisp, modern look of Deco Deluxe, Inc., NYC, to the warm neo-classical and federal furnishings from David Beauchamp Antiques of New Hampshire will delight attendees. This is truly the one antiques show of the summer season that is worth the wait.

The Summer Antiques Show will be held on Saturday, July 31 from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Sunday, August 1, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. for a general admission of $6. Further information can be obtained from Oliver and Gannon Associates, Inc. PO Box 651, Altamont, NY 12009, telephone: 518.861.5478 or e-mail to: shows@albany.net. ## Bringing the Beach Home

I'm about as fair-skinned as a Jewish girl could possibly get. So when I mistook my moisturizer for sunscreen, and headed out on a boat for 4 hours in the middle of a sweltering Hamptons afternoon, the outcome was not pretty. After being hailed everything from "pink tomato" to just plain meshuggenah, I decided that I would need to lie low for a week. But what is a gal to do when she's out East, surrounded by golden sand, and clear, splashing water, but can't go out in the sun, let alone lie on a beach? Clearly, the answer must be to bring on the Arts and Crafts!

Great for window sills, or as centerpieces for garden tables, seashell plant holders are quick and easy to make. All you need is a seashell, some soap, air plants, and a mister. Hannah Milman, Holiday and crafts editor of Martha Stewart Living, suggests using largish shells (4 to 7 inches long), such as nautilus, hermit crab, or sea snail, that have cavities in which to insert the plants. If the shell is dirty, soak it overnight in soap and water, adding a few drops of bleach to help remove the smell and any remaining bacteria. Insert an air plant into the cavity of the shell. When the plant is secure, heavily mist it, making sure none of the water gets into the shell.

If you want to take it one step further, Milman suggests using twigs and twine to create a twig base on which to place your newly crafted planter. All you need to do is gather three twigs, each about 8 to 14 inches long, and tie them together with twine about three-quarters from the bottom end. Spread the twigs out slightly so they form a tripod, and then adjust the tripod so that it will hold the shell planter. Don't forget to place your planter in a bright spot with good circulation, and it is imperative to mist the plants at least once a week.

A shell mirror is also a good idea for adding a summery twist to your Hamptons home. All you need is a relatively flat frame so that the seashells can be easily glued to the surface. You can buy either painted or unfinished wood. The mirror itself can be made by applying silverleaf to the back side of the glass included in the frame, which gives it an antique look that complements the shells, or by having a glazier cut a custom piece of mirrored glass.

When the frame is finished, arrange the shells to form a pattern. Then, make pencil marks or take a Polaroid picture to use as a guide when gluing the shells in place. Any variety of shell will work as long as the size suits the proportions of your frame. Begin gluing the shells onto the frame with craft glue, attaching the bottom layer of shells in your pattern first. Continue to create your pattern by gluing shells to overlap the first layer. Finally, allow your work to dry overnight.

Sand candles are great for decorating garden tables. All you need is a pair of rubber gloves, fine craft sand, food coloring, a pillar candle, spray adhesive and a plastic tub. Mary Ellen Pinkham, from the HGTV television show, TIPical Mary Ellen, instructs her viewers to put on rubber gloves, and then mix together sand and food coloring with their hands. After, all you have to do is hold the candle by the wick, apply the spray adhesive, and roll the candle into the sand.

A lampshade necklace is also a way to add a unique touch to your summer home. Using a power drill, carefully drill a hole into each shell, using the lowest speed possible to protect the shell. Then, thread ribbon through the shell and tie a knot. String along enough shells to encircle your lampshade (from the HGTV show, Smart Solutions).

Some might think that spending your afternoon gluing seashells to picture frames may be a sign of depleting brain cells, unless you're Martha Stewart or a mom with young children. However, I am none of those things, and I say don't knock anything till you try it. Not only did I manage to entertain myself in my week as a recluse, but I also ended up with some truly fun and interesting pieces, that will hopefully serve as a reminder to always lather on the sunscreen.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

What seems to be the never-ending changes of East End realty continues with Hahn Realty of the North Fork and Resort Properties International of Westhampton Beach going to Brown Harris Stevens on July 13th 2004. Suzanne L. Hahn, founder in 1984 and president of Hahn with offices in both Greenport and Cutchogue, will become vice president of Brown Harris Stevens Hamptons LLC covering the North Fork. Lawrence Porter, owner of Resort Properties established in 1978, will become executive vice president in areas on the South Fork. The offices will become closely networked throughout the Hamptons, New York, Palm Beach and have an exclusive affiliation with Christies Great Estates. Brown Harris Stevens is owned by Terra Holdings, a premier provider of real estate services in Manhattan, and is one of the largest and oldest real estate firms in New York City. After being approached by many of the larger real estate corporations, both North and South Fork offices feel the match with Brown Harris Stevens is a good fit.

And, in East Hampton, Devlin McNiff has just brought on Hal Zwick, an East Hampton business man, to direct their business brokerage end and commercial real estate. Zwick has bought, sold and operated several businesses on the East End, including The Paradise in Sag Harbor and BookHampton in both East and Southampton. He brings with him 18 years of Manhattan marketing and advertising. Devlin McNiff's Stuart Epstein feels that the new commercial division will fill an important niche in East End real estate.

Southampton. This historic building, on 1.1 acres that dates back to 1684, was completely renovated as a restaurant in 1997 and also includes an attached 10-room inn yet to be restored with antique and historic features still intact. The restaurant seats up to 175 people and the outdoor brick dining terrace seats 54. It has a 2500 sq. ft. meeting room, two car garage and new commercial kitchen. The property was sold by Dam Pond area soon to be Beach Cove Estates in East Marion in East Marion.

Alan M. Schneider Associates in Southampton to a New York City investor.

Also in Southampton, the oceanfront home of the late Roone Arledge was just sold. Arledge, who was an ABC news legend, created shows such as The Wide World of Sports, Monday Night Football and Nightline. The home on 4.4 acres has five fireplaces. It was sold to a partner of Goldman Sachs in New York by Arledge's widow and was listed with Allan M. Schneider Associates in Southampton.

On the market:

On Dam Pond in East Marion, a unique development project is taking place and is about to be placed on the market in a week or so. Ten waterfront lots will be subdivided into parcels, just under three acres each, to be offered at $1,750,000. Enzo Morabito, broker and owner to the project says, "It is the most controlled and conservation minded development plan ever on the North Fork." The property also consists of two farm lots yet to be cleared. "It's as close to paradise as you can get," says Enzo, who could have and did get approvals for 34 lots and instead opted for just 12 in order to preserve as much of the land as possible. 75% of the property has been left to open space and is backed by over 100 acres of preserved land. The parcels that sit among the salt marshes and spill out onto the sound will be offered by Prudential Douglas Elliman's Southold office.

Rentals:

You can rent year round in Amagansett for $100,000. A 4 bedroom, 3.5 bath home is surrounded by a moat and is within walking distance to the village and ocean beaches. It is perched on a hill and must be accessed by bridge. It has a heated pool and is listed with

Main Street Properties in Amagansett.

The Numbers:

In the past 15 years, Sag Harbor has seen a 20% increase in summer and part time home owners. The real estate market in Sag is very active yet its school district ranks among those with the lowest number of students per square mile on the East End. The town is seeing a steady increase in growth. Year round homeowners seem to be buying the lower priced homes and the higher end goes to summer people. Just under half of the entire area is still vacant or undeveloped land. eastendrealst@aol.com

Police Blotter

Family Heirloom Fleeced From Front Yard.

It appears an antique cast iron flowerpot caught a thief's roving eye. The urn, which had been in a Southampton family's possession since the early 1900s, mysteriously vanished the evening of July 6. This wasn't the first time someone tried to make off with the pot, an earlier attempt occurred about 20 years ago – but the pot proved uncooperative and crumbled during the attack. It was repaired and there it remained a beautiful haven for brilliant flora and flitting butterflies.

Cooler Capers Continue in Montauk.

A guest at the Royal Atlantic reported to East Hampton Town Police that a cooler filled with soda, wine and beer was removed from his hotel room's balcony. Hint: if it's of value you might want to keep it under lock and key.

Are the Seventies Here Again?

While the gas crunch is being felt all around, it was, apparently, too much for one Southampton Town Parks and Recreation Department employee to bear. His solution to the oil crisis – pilfering a bit of gasoline – netted an arrest on charges of petit larceny.

Bang. Bang. Pow! Pow! What a Way to End a Soiree.

An overly exuberant partygoer fired shots into the air after an affair ended in Bridgehampton, according to Southampton Town Police reports. At the time of the shooting, officers, who were called to the scene to help move the crowd along, heard seven shots fired from about 200 feet away. The airborne missives caused a mini stampede, preventing the officers from nabbing the lone gunner. By the time they made it through the crowd, the shooter had vamoosed. However, witnesses did provide a description of both the assailant and his getaway mobile. While no injuries were sustained, the incident has been classified as second-degree reckless endangerment. Anyone with information on the shooting is advised to call police at 728-5000.

Surf's Up, But Board's Long Gone. According to police reports, a Seasonings brand surfboard was stolen from the top of a car parked in a Sag Harbor driveway overnight. The board, which belonged to a nine-year-old, has Nadine written in black script on its deck with two purple dolphins at the tip and purple fins by the tail.

When Houseguests Do More Than Eat You Out of House and Home.

According to a North Sea woman's account, two houseguests stole more than $5,000 worth of goods from her home. The alleged thieves gained entry from keys she supplied a month prior and later used them when they returned to clean house.

Burglars Hit Jackpot in Southampton Heist.

The scene, a ne'er used home. The take...about $70,000 in furniture including a high boy worth about $50,000. According to police reports, a broken window was the key to getting inside this not-so-vacant residence. Once inside, our handyman thieves took doors off their hinges to allow an easy exit for this large-scale stick up.

Hullabaloo at Lakeside Bar and Grill.

Fun and games at the Lakeside Bar and Grill in Montauk was cut short by a beastly brawl. Apparently unable to end a dispute peacefully, several boozers came to blows. Two people were injured in the melee along with a glass door that was smashed. Its offense? Being at the wrong place at the wrong time I guess. One of the pugilists trotted off claiming he would return with a gun. According to police reports, a search of the bruisers and attending vehicles did not turn up any arms. Thank goodness for small miracles.

A GOOD GUY

Dear Dan,

Why did you claim that I thought Julius Vogel was lousy when I have a whole chapter on the man in my book NOT STRICTLY KOSHER, and I have many times pointed out in lectures and articles just how New Zealand would not have the tone it has if it were not for him. He was responsible for the founding of the major rail line, getting New Zealand to be the first country to have a balanced budget, national medical service, was on the board of the first university and medical school in the South Seas (in Dunedin), pushed for the women's rights to vote which led New Zealand to be the first country to give women the right to vote in 1894, and founded the first school for the deaf and much more. He was the target of nasty cartoons which I included in the book. But you need not be nasty with my reputation as a scholar, writer, and lecturer. Have you read my book?

Please do not quote me incorrectly,

COLLEGE QUESTIONS

Dear Dan,

My daughter will be attending Southampton this fall as a freshman on an athletic scholarship. I read your article two weeks ago about a town meeting to be held on July 7th, which I will not be able to attend. At orientation today I asked about this so-called meeting, and to my surprise both the president and provost could not remember it. I have heard and read many things about the school closing and it seemed to me the people of the East End DO NOT WANT IT TO HAPPEN. I called the president a LIAR today, he stated that nothing could be done. I beg to differ.

He mentioned how he walked up and down Dune road looking for help and funds, I don't really believe him. I also took it upon myself to write some letters to ask for help: Ted Turner, Wang, Oprah, Wilpon, Hillary Clinton, etc. And the Turner Foundation was the only one to respond to me so far.

I want to do something to keep this Campus open; I do not trust this president who spoke to us. A parent next to me even said he looked and spoke like "an evil man."

Could you please tell me what happened at the meeting? I also heard that there might be a man (who is involved with the school already) who is trying to raise funds and buy it out from LIU, is there any truth to that?

Thank you for your time, and I hope to hear from you.

I really would like to save this campus, and help the people of the East End, many of whom will lose jobs.

Again, thank you for time and hopeful a response.

HAMPTON GROVES HAPPENINGS

Dear Dan,

We read the article that appeared on the July 3rd events at the Hampton Groves Beach and would like to point out some misinformation. Our family has lived for 55 years in the Hampton Groves development.

If anything, members of both groups expressed a mutual frustration that the town had not notified the residents of the relatively new Hampton Groves how they would be affected by this age-old Shinnecock tradition.

Our association is NOT new at all. We have been around for more than 50 years. Dr. Stump who built his house in the early 1920's owned the entire land. He gradually sold the land off and houses were built, the association came as that. The land has been private property since the 1920s. Our members live on Sunset Ave (select houses) and inside the gates of Hampton Place, Shinnecock Place, Pinetree Place, and Bay View Avenue. The sign was recently moved due to numerous trespassers that have always plagued the Groves beach, but it has been there for years. Our signs are usually torn down.

We were present during the events last year. It was apparently not included in the article that one of the most active members of the association who was BELOW the high tide line down the beach taking those photographs alone with 2 friends were assaulted by a female member of the tribe. The police called in but no action was taken. The women who performed the crime died of a heroin overdose. Later, we were told...

In addition, last year the Shinnecocks did not shuttles elders. There were at least ten cars driving down the beach recklessly far above the high tide mark on Groves property, and it was visible that they were NOT elders, some even had Connecticut license plates. It was in the middle of the afternoon as well. They happened to be very nice vehicles at that.

The Shinnecocks neighbor our association's beach property and the supposed casino site. In the past, we got along quite well with the elders of the tribe and they for years let the children of our neighborhood enjoy their dunes. With the casino thing, the whole situation with the Shinnecocks changed.

In addition, we would like to mention that last year a Shinnecock security guard was walking his bike across our beach property and claimed that two children had wandered down the beach and that it was private property.

We enjoy Dan's Papers and hope to see more great articles.

Thank you,
Longtime Hampton Groves Resident

CANDIDATE CLARITY

Dear Dan,

Why do you not recognize other candidates running for president, such as the Green Party Candidate, David Cobb, or the Libertarian Party Candidate, Michael Bednarek? There are also several other candidates running that have not necessarily been in the eye of the media; however, this is a democracy and all candidates should be recognized and scrutinized.

WHAT WILL BECOME OF SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE?

Dear Dan,

My heart goes out to the hundreds of students and faculty, many of whom hail from all over the country, and whose education and livelihood will soon be affected by the shutdown of Southampton College's undergraduate division.

I too have a special affection for this 41 year-old institution. Many years ago as a young housewife and mother, I drove way out East and checked into the somewhat Hitchcock Ian Shinnecock Motel (not knowing I'd have to trek to the highway to find a phone) and enrolled myself in a one-week fiction workshop taught by Looking For Mr. Goodbar author Judith Rossner. That week at Southampton College was to change my life forever.

I was instantly struck by both the congeniality and quality of the college's faculty, the small but rapidly expanding writing program, but mostly the environs—the natural habitat and inspiring atmosphere in which the program seemed cradled. Perhaps it was the power of these surroundings that created a less intimidating workplace for both faculty and students, certainly a wonderful place in which to learn, to teach and especially to write. I promised myself that I would return.

Over the years I've continued to participate in the Southampton's Writer's Conference studying under such generous and brilliant writers as Frank McCourt and Roger Rosenblatt, and just last fall I was accepted into the school's M.F.A. program in Writing and Literature. The college, which has stood as a cultural and educational center for all of the Hamptons, has provided a vehicle for so many people like myself... that rare and unique opportunity to expand personally, no matter what age, and although it is said these programs will continue, I can't help but worry about the huge void in our community if the funding necessary to keep them thriving is not soon made available.

FULL FARM LIST

Dear Dan,

I am writing about the story, Why Buy Local? In your July 2 issue. The story was written by Geraldine Pluenneke and was an interesting discussion about health.

Dan's Papers inserted a list of local farm stands into the story. I was disappointed to note that Fairview Farm's stand at the juncture of Mecox Road and HorseMill Lane (about a mile south of Route 27) in Bridgehampton was not included in your list. The stand sells vegetables, fruits, honey, cheese, some baked goods, and flowers, all produced on the farm.

In the fall, Fairview Farm runs a maze in its cornfield, which has become a favorite fall activity for local parents and children alike.

TOMATO, TOMAHTO

Dear Dan,

In suggesting, copiously (July 9), that one of John Kerry's prime interests in winning the election is to raise the value of Heinz stock, you are serving a dish of rotten and inedible innuendo. Your speculation sounds suspiciously like a catchall of desperation over a bottle of ketchup.
